INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY

P R E F A C E.

ALMOST every civilized Nation has its Nobles; whose Ancestors having been distinguished for Wisdom, Valour, good Fortune, or Favoritism, have been raised to a Dignity which places them above the Level of the People at large.

IN England, the Nobility have many privileges. They are Senators in their own right, without being subject to the mandates of the Court, or the choice of the People; and are not only hereditary Lawgivers, but the House of Peers is the supreme Court of Judicature, with a power of controuling, if appealed to, every other Court of Law and Equity. What adds to this dignity, they have in general large possessions; Titles having seldom been conferred on poverty, though poverty sometimes unites itself with Titles.

IF, however, we consider the Nobles as men, we do not find them wiser, braver, nor more virtuous and happy than men in middle life; nor are they in truth more enviable: nevertheless, a title gives a splendour we all admire; and the Nobility, however falsely, are considered by the generality of mankind as a superior class of Beings. This makes them a favourite theme; and in polite circles nothing gives a greater brilliancy to conversation than a general knowledge of the Nobility and their Connexions.

THE first particulars which we wish to know of a Nobleman with whom we are totally unacquainted, are, his NAME and TITLES; his AGE, and, if arrived at maturity, whether he is MARRIED, or a WIDOWER, or yet remains a BACHELOR. If Married, we are anxious to know the Sharer of his Honours; and whether they are blessed with Children; how many: their Sex, Ages, and even their Names become objects of our curiosity.

HAVING become acquainted with the particulars of his Family, we next wish for a knowledge of his FAMILY-CONNEXIONS. We are desirous of knowing to what other noble Families he is allied, either as Brother, Uncle, Nephew, or as a more distant relation.

NOR are we yet satisfied; for having once entered into the enquiry, we become more and more interested; we are desirous of knowing how he became possessed of his Honours; consequently of learning his DESCENT, or who his Ancestors were; how the Honours of the Family arose; in what manner and when he succeeded to the Title; and (if any) who is his HEIR-APPARENT.

THESE particulars, we conceive, comprehend every thing which is useful to a general knowledge of the Nobility and their Connexions; and to ascertain them is the object of the present Work, which was planned and principally composed by a Gentleman for his own information and amusement.

THE difficulty, if not impossibility, of procuring authentic and accurate accounts, as well as the fluctuations which are daily taking place in such a number of Families as compose the present Peerages, must necessarily have occasioned some errors and inaccuracies, for which the candour and indulgence of the Reader are respectfully solicited; and which, when pointed out, (if the present attempt shall meet with public encouragement) shall be carefully corrected in a future Edition.

No labour nor expence, however, has been spared on the part of the Publisher, to render it, as nearly as the nature of it will permit, a correct and finished Performance; so far especially as it relates to the living Connexions of the present Families. In regard to dead alliances, a studied brevity has been observed: for how useful or amusing soever the dry Pages of Pedigree may be to the Antiquary, or to the particular Family to which they belong, they serve but to perplex and disgust the generality of Readers.

BESIDES the satisfaction resulting from a general knowledge of the Connexions of the Nobility, there is a pleasure in discriminating their Persons and Equipages. To this intent Engravings of the ARMS, SUPPORTERS, and MOTTOES of the several Families are given: and to render these the more intelligible, a brief INTRODUCTION TO HERALRY is added.

INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY.

WHILST Warriors fought in ARMOUR, with their Faces hid under the Visors of their Helmets, some Marks of Distinction conspicuously placed upon their Armour, or Dress, became necessary to identify their Persons.

The SHIELD, pendant at the Breast, or held forward upon the left Arm in Action, was admirably adapted to receive these distinguishing Marks, which being depicted, the Shield became in effect the Face of the Warrior.

However, like the natural Features of the Face, those of the Shield were only discernible in Front, and on a near view; and, in Action, it was necessary that Commanders, at least, should be known at a distance, and in every direction: — The CREST, raised high upon the Head, was singularly suited to this Purpose.

The Emblems thus borne in War became BADGES OF HONOUR in Peace: — They were engraven upon Seals, embroidered upon Surcoats, sculptured upon Monuments, and descended with the Blood of the Warrior.

There is great Reason to suppose, however, that whilst Mankind remained in a State of continual Warfare, the DESCENT OF HONOURS was little attended to: Every Man was himself a Warrior, and was principally anxious to acquire Honours of his own. But Nations being formed and civilized, the People became divided into civil and military; and the former having no Opportunities of acquiring martial Honours themselves, were the more tenacious of those of their Ancestors.

As Nations grew in Magnitude, Arms increased in Number, growing into near Resemblance of each other; the Intervals of War, too, grew long, and the Memory being no longer adequate to the Task of making extemporary Distinctions, Impositions became practicable: Thus, in Civilization and Peace, probably originated the LAWS OF ARMORIES.

That Armories took their Rise in Northern Europe, is on all Hands confessed: But among what Nation Family Honours first became hereditary, or in what Place the Laws of Armories were first established, is less certain. Almost every Nation contends for so high an Honour, and it is probable that more than one have a right to share in it. GERMANY appears to have the best claim; it is however highly probable, that whenever a Nation arrived at that Degree of Civilization and vi INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY.

Tranquillity at which Families began to quarrel about ancestral Honours, COURTS MILITARY were established.

These Courts, being Conservancies of military Merit, were properly placed under the Jurisdiction of the principal Officers of the Army; which Officers, wherever the Feudal Form of Government took Place, were two; the CONSTABLE and the MARSHAL; about whose Origin and Office Volumes have been written.

In the Annals of this Country no mention is made of these two great Officers of State, nor of the Laws of Armories, before the Norman Conquest took place. A Nation of Warriors wanted not a College of Heralds. Pomp and Parade had not yet got footing. English Kings still fought their own Battles. But no sooner was the Conqueror seated in his new Government, than a Constable and a Marshal were appointed, and a Court Military established, agreeably to his feudal Government in Normandy.

Armorial Honours now flowed from the Throne to the Chieftain, and from the Chieftain to his Followers; and it is probable, though not certain, that, from this era, the voluntary ASSUMPTION of Arms was stopt. Nevertheless the Increase of Armorial Bearings was rapid: THE CROISADES, by admitting all Ranks and Degrees of People whose Enthusiasm prompted them to mix in the Holy Warfare, and consequently to be intitled to military Distinctions, increased them abundantly; and TOURNAMENTS, by stamping them with singular Value (no Man being permitted to tourney whose Ancestors had not borne armorial Honours through three Generations), made them the more anxiously sought after.

Matters thus complicated became abstruse, and required some scientific Rules and Regulations to render them intelligible. The Constable and Marshal had under them certain assistant Officers (whose Origin cannot be traced) styled HERALDS and PURSUIVANTS OF ARMS: out of these grew superior Officers, entitled KINGS OF ARMS; and, under them, they had a Gradation of inferior Assistants. These Officers were incorporated by Richard III. under the Title of Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms. Their Charter was confirmed by Edward VI. and re-granted by Philip and Mary, wherein their Number is limited to thirteen. Queen Elizabeth confirmed their Privileges, and ordered them a Code of Regulations, pointing out their respective Departments, and their Studies; styling them the COLLEGE OF HERALDS.

These Officers of Arms had not only the Conservancy of Pedigrees and armorial Honours, but were empowered, under the Controul of the Marshal, to make original Grants of Arms. They had also the ordering of funeral and other public Processions. These and other Sources of Emolument rendered their Offices extremely lucrative, and raised the College into considerable Importance. These very Emoluments, however, proved the Origin of its Decline. Quarrels among the Kings about the Loaves and Fishes, and a long contested Dispute with the Painter-Stainers about who should reap the Harvests of funeral Folly, entirely deranged the College; so that, towards the close of Queen Elizabeth's reign, we find it in the hands of Commissioners.

During these animosities and convulsions, however, the PROVINCIAL VISITATIONS do not appear to have been interrupted. These Visitations were were made by the two provincial Kings of Arms; namely, CLARENCEUX King of the Southern, and NORROY King of the Northern Counties. The intent of them was to collect Heraldic Information; and if any thing Heraldic be laudable, these deserve the highest Praise. The Registering of Arms and Pedigrees is the only useful Part of a College of Heralds; and without provincial Visitations its Records must be extremely imperfect. These Visitations began about 1528, and closed with the last Century. The principal Reason for their Discontinuance was the want of Power in the Military Court to punish Delinquents; the Power of that Court resting with the Constable and Marshal jointly; and no Constable of England being appointed, the Power of the Court Military fell to the Ground, and with it the Law of Armories.

The College of Arms still exists; consisting of

Garter, principal King of Arms,	} principal Kings of Arms,
Clarenceux,
Norroy,
Six Heralds in ordinary,
Four Pursuivants, and to these are added Five Heralds extraordinary, that do not belong to the College. And though no legal Action will lie for Assumption of Arms, the College is still considered as the only Fountain from which honourable Arms can spring; and is said to receive annually considerable Sums of Money for such honours!

Thus having given a Sketch of the Rise and Progress of Heraldic Science, we now proceed to the Science itself.

ELEMENTS OF HERALDRY.

HERALDRY is the Art of blazoning and marshalling ARMS and ARMORIAL ACCOMPANIMENTS.

BLAZONING is the Art of describing, IN WORDS, a Shield of Arms (or other Armorial Device), in such Manner, that an Artist can delineate and depict from such BLAZON a perfect Icon of the original Shield.

Before this can be effected, Shields, Tinctures, Lines, Ordinaries, Charges, &c. are necessary to be understood.

SHIELDS are of various Forms; and modern ESCUTCHEONS still more multifarious. The Shields which occur upon ancient Seals are chiefly two; one of them a Triangle, formed of two curved and one straight Line; the other a long Square, having the Corners at the Base rounded off to a Point, resembling the Gothic Arch reversed. These are the Shields to which Arms have been usually granted, and are probably the original Shields of ancient Warriors. Hence the Practice of placing the greater Number of Charges above, and the smaller below, as Three, Two, and One. Therefore, for a single Coat, the ancient Shield is the most eligible; but for the Purpose of Quartering (which will be spoken of presently) the Escutcheon adopted in the foregoing Plates of Arms is obviously preferable. See Plate A.

The Arms of a Maiden or a Widow are not borne upon a SHIELD, but in a LOZENGE. See the Arms of the Pecestes.

INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY.

The POINTS of the Shield are Nine in Number. See Plate A.

- A. The Dexter Chief Point.
- B. The Middle Chief Point.
- C. The Sinister Chief Point.
- D. The Honour, or Collar Point.
- E. The Centre, or Fess Point.
- F. The Navel, or Nombrel Point.
- G. The Dexter Base Point.
- H. The Middle Base Point.
- I. The Sinister Base Point.

The Honour and Nombrel Points are superfluous and useless.

TINCTURES are also Nine in Number: namely,

Yellow	Red	Purple
White	Blue	Orange
Black	Green	Dark-red.

The three last, however, are seldom used in Blazonry; being probably invented, like the two superfluous Points, to make up the favourite Number Nine. Yellow and White are termed METALS, being supposed to be represented by Gold and Silver; the rest are COLOURS.

Besides these simple Tinctures there are in Heraldry certain Mixtures of Colours, or of Metals and Colours, termed FURS; and these, too, some Authors will have to be Nine in Number: Five are as follow;

Ermine, White with black Spots.

Ermines, Black with white Spots.

Erminois, Gold with black Spots.

Peau, Black with Gold Spots.

Vair. See Plate A.

Note, If the Spots of Ermine have each of them a red Hair in it, the Fur is termed Erminites.

In Painting, Colours are obvious; but in Sculpture, Form and Shadow only are seen, Colours are absent: It has therefore been found expedient, in all Matters of Drawing, Engraving, and other Sculpture, when Colours are necessary to be expressed, to represent them by Lines and Points, as in Plate A.

It is further necessary to observe upon TINCTURES, that in the Language of Heraldry Arms are blazoned by Metals and Colours, when they belong to Gentlemen, Esquires, Knights, and Baronets; by precious Stones, when they are those of Peers; and by Planets, when they belong to Sovereigns.

Colours.	Names.		Stones.	Planets.
Yellow	Or	by contraction	Topaz	Sol
White	Argent		Pearl	Luna
Red	Gules		Ruby	Mars
Blue	Azure		Sapphire	Jupiter
Green	Vert		Emerald	Venus
Purple	Purpure		Amethyst	Mercury
Black	Sable		Diamond	Saturn
Orange	Tenne	Prop.	Hayacinth	Dragon's Head
Dark-red	Sanguine		Sardonix	Dragon's Tail.
Natural Colours	Proper

It is also proper to mention, that, according to the Rules of Blazonry, the same tinctorial Epithet ought not to be repeated, in blazoning any one particular Coat. To avoid this Repetition, the technical Phrases of the first, of the second, of the last, of the Field, &c. are made use of. Thus, for Ar. on a Cross Gu. four Lions Ar. it is usual to say Ar. on a Cross Gu. four Lions of the First, or four Lions of the Field. That is, on a white Shield a red Cross, and on this red Cross four white Lions; the Colour first mentioned in this and every other Case referring to the Face of the Shield: or, as it is more usually termed, The Field of the Escutcheon.

LINES, termed in Heraldry Lines of Partition, are Nineteen in Number. See Plate A.

It only remains in this place to be observed, that if a Fess or other Ordinary be said to be indented (an Epithet frequently used) the Points of the Scollops are turned inward; but if ingrailed, the Scollops themselves are turned inward, the Points standing out; and that the difference between indented and dancetté is, that in the former case the Indents are smaller and more numerous than in the latter. For examples, see Plate 59, Drogheda, and Plate 60, Athlone.

ORDINARIES. These are also said to be Nineteen in number. Heraldic Writers, however, enumerate Twenty-one.

The Chief	The Saltier	The Voider
The Fess	The Cheveron	The Border
The Bar	The Quarter	The Orle
The Pile	The Canton	The Escutcheon
The Pale	The Gyron	The Tressure
The Cross	The Flaque	The Frett
The Bend	The Flanch	The Label, or File.

The origin of Ordinaries is unknown, and their especial intention but little understood. They are said to differ from Charges in being themselves chargeable; and they appear to have been invented to diversify and difference Coat-armours: The Field being no longer to be varied without confusion, the most ancient and honourable, and probably the original, Charges were ordained to receive others less notorious, in the same manner as the Shield originally received, and still receives them. By this means Distinctions between Family and Family became easy, and in a manner infinite.

But in process of time, the BRANCHES OF THE SAME FAMILY became numerous, and called for Distinction. To this end MARKS OF CADENCE, OR DISTINCTIONS OF HOUSES were invented. They are in number Nine, namely,

The Label	The Martlet	The Rose
The Crescent	The Annulet	The Cross moline, and
The Mullet	The Fleur-de-lis	The Quarterfoil double.

Thus the Label denotes the eldest Son, or the first Branch; the Crescent, the second, &c. &c. a Label on a Label, differences the first Son of the first House, a Crescent on a Label, the second, &c. &c. The Border also was formerly much in use as a Distinction of Houses. For the several ORDINARIES and DISTINCTIONS OF HOUSES, see Plate B.

Before

INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY.

Before we quit the subject of Ordinaries it will be proper to mention, that, besides the original Grants of Arms, ADDITIONS OF HONOUR have been bestowed by Sovereigns as rewards of Acts of Bravery, or other meritorious Deeds. These AUGMENTATIONS of ARMS have been usually chosen from among the Ordinaries, and are said to be Nine in number, namely,

The Border	The Gyron	The Flanch
The Quarter	The Pile	The Voider
The Canton	The Flaque	The Escutcheon.

The Ordinaries thus used as Augmentations are frequently charged, though sometimes only coloured, as Barry of six ar. and sa. a Canton erm. by the name of Marshall. The Canton and the Quarter have been most especially chosen for this purpose.

CHARGES. There is scarcely any thing in the heavens, the earth, or the waters beneath it, which has not been represented as a Charge of Coat-armour. It is however a maxim in Heraldry, that "the plainier a Coat is, the higher is its antiquity." Thus the Arms of Grey, late Duke of Kent, perhaps the oldest Family in the kingdom, is simply Barry of six ar. and az. But as the number of Families entitled to armorial Distinctions encreased, a complication of Charges became necessary, and at length Charges upon Charges were found expedient.

It is not intended in this place even to enumerate, much less to describe, the several Charges of Coat-armour. There are, however, a few which merit, and indeed require, particular notice, namely,

The Lozenge	The Roundle
The Fusile	The Drop.
The Mascle

With respect to the three first, authors have been divided in opinion, whether they should be classed with the Ordinaries or the Charges; so little is the essential characteristic of an Ordinary understood. For the LOZENGE, see the Dexter side of the Shield with Arms impaled in Plate A. For the FUSILE, see the Sinister side of the same Shield: and for the MASCLE, see the first and fourth Quarters of the Escutcheon with Arms Quartered, in the same Plate.

The ROUNDLE varies its form with the substance of which it is composed: thus, Roundlets of Gold or Silver are flat, as a piece of coin; but those of any other substance are globular: and even these vary their name with the Tincture they bear; thus Roundles

Or, are called	Bezants
Argent	Plates
Vert	Pomeis
Azure	Hurts
Sable	Ogresses, or Pellets
Gules	Torteaues
Purple	Golpes
Tenné	Oranges
Sanguine	Guzes.

DROPS

DROPS likewise change the Name with the Tincture ; thus, if they be

Or,	they are termed	Gutté d'Or,	that is	Drops of Gold
Argent		Gutté d'Eau		Drops of Water
Vert		Gutté d'Olive		Drops of Oil of Olives
Azure		Gutté de Larmes		Drops of Tears
Sable		Gutté de Poix		Drops of Pitch
Gules		Gutté de Sang		Drops of Blood.

With respect to the other Charges which occur in the foregoing Plates of Arms, comparing the several Shields with their respective Blazons will convey more definite ideas than all the words we can in this place adduce.

All therefore which remain to be added upon this subject, are some GENERAL RULES OF BLAZON.

Circumlocution and tautology are equally inadmissible in Blazonry: a fewness of words and a scientific arrangement of ideas characterize the language of Heraldry. The Shield claims precedence of the Ordinary, the Ordinary of the Charge: if both the Field and Ordinaries are charged, the Charges on the Field are placed first. Tinctures universally follow the Shield, the Ordinary, or the Charge to which they respectively belong. In fine, all Blazons begin with the Colour of the Shield, and end with that of the most remote Charge ; unless when the Shield is of more than one Colour, or is divided into regular Compartments and then the Line of Partition, or the Mode of Variegation, is first noticed.

Persons who wish to become conversant in the art of Blazon, would do well to exercise themselves in blazoning, or describing in words the Arms of the foregoing Plates, in terms agreeable to the following Alphabetical Arrangement.

MARSHALLING.

The Hieroglyphics of Heraldry are not confined to Distinctions, but extend to Alliances: BLAZONING pertains more especially to that, MARSHALLING to this Department of the Heraldic Science.

ALLIANCES, whether family or official, are expressed either

By Impaling,

By the Escutcheon of Pretence, or

By Quartering.

IMPALING shews the Alliance of Husband and Wife, and the Connection between the Office and the Officer who holds it. Impaling is most usually effected by placing the two Coats side by side upon one Shield, divided by a Line of Partition in pale ; namely, a Line drawn through the middle Chief and the middle Base Points. See Plate A. The Arms of the Husband are usually placed on the Dexter, those of the Wife on the Sinister Side of the Escutcheon. The Arms of the Office take precedence, in like manner, of those of the Holder. Formerly Impaling Impaling was sometimes performed by Dimidiation; that is, halving the two Coats, and placing the Dexter half of the Husband's against the Sinister side of the Wife's, thus forming one Coat. But this method, which is still practised in France, frequently alters, and even totally changes the leading features of the Shield, thereby causing ambiguity and confusion.

The ESCUTCHEON OF PRETENCE points out the alliance of Baron and Femme, when the Wife was an Heiress; — more especially if she brought to the Husband an acquisition of landed property; her family honours as well as her family estate centering in him; and he shews it by bearing her paternal Arms on an ESCUTCHEON OF PRETENCE, placed upon the center of his own Shield; in order, as it is said, to publish his Right of Pretensions to her lands.

NOTE. — A charged Escutcheon, placed on the center of a Shield, is borne upon other occasions than that of shewing the alliance between a married Heiress and her Husband.

QUARTERING denotes the alliance between-existent and extinct families (or Branches of Families); or, in other words, it declares the UNION OF FAMILIES. Thus, the Son of an Heiress does not bear his maternal Arms upon an Escutcheon of Pretence over his paternal Coat, but QUARTERS the former with the latter: for in him not only the Estates, but the Arms of the two Families become united. If his maternal Coat has previously received in like manner the Arms of pre-existent Families (or Branches of Families), he quarters them all; his paternal Coat falling into the general conflux. The Family of Percy, and that of De Ferrars, are remarkable instances of the CONFLUX OF FAMILIES. The latter quarters not less than one hundred and sixty Coats! whilst other ancient Families remain without a single Quartering upon their Escutcheons. When Quarterings become numerous, they are admissible only upon Banners, or other funeral Trophies; the Bearer having it in choice to use any one, two, four, or other number, upon his seals, his carriages, or his utensils.

ACCOMPANIMENTS OF ARMS.

The SHIELD OF ARMS has thus far principally engaged our attention; but the Rules of Blazon, and the Laws of Marshalling, are not especial to the SHIELD, but are also applicable to its ACCOMPANIMENTS; — the exterior Devices and Ornaments incident to a complete armorial Achievement. These are,

The Helmet, with its Mantling and Wreath,

The Crest,

The Supporters, and

The Motto: Together with

Crowns, Coronets, and other Badges of Honor and Distinction.

The HELMET, or Armour for the Head, was anciently the inseparable Accompaniment of the Shield of Arms. On ancient Seals we see the Shield reclining upon its dexter Base, and leaning backward against the Helmet, with its Mantling flowing behind, and surmounted with with its Wreath and Crest. The MANTLING appears to have been intended merely as an Ornament, not as a Covering, to the Head; but modern Heralds, through Ignorance or Caprice, have enlarged a few flowing Scrolls, first into a Hood, and of late into a Cloak, large enough to cover the entire Pannel of a Coach. The WREATH is fixed upon the Top of the Helmet, as a fastening or stay to the Crest. It is said to have been a kind of Garland or Chaplet; but being usually drawn in Profile, its Curvature does not appear.

CRESTS, as has been before observed, were originally the Ensigns whereby Commanders were distinguished in the field of battle; and, prior to the Institution of the Order of the Garter, there are no traces of their being used in this country as armorial Bearings. But the Knights Companions of that Order, in imitation of their Sovereign Edward III. (the first King of England who bore a Crest upon his Helmet) beginning to bear those armorial Badges, the fashion became prevalent, and every person entitled to bear Coat-armour assumed to himself a Crest; which, making no part of the Arms, has generally been considered as assumable and changeable at the will (though not at the caprice) of the Bearer; — and, even in the most rigid times, Heralds or Kings of Arms had an authority to grant them without the privity or approbation of the Marshal. When purchasing Grants of Arms became fashionable, “a Crest was generally thrown into the Bargain.”

SUPPORTERS. The origin of Supporters is uncertain. It has generally been understood, that they took their rise in Tournaments: — “On which occasion,” say the advocates for this opinion, “it was customary for the Knights who came to engage in those military disports, to have a Shield of their Arms adorned with Helmets, Mantlings, Wreaths, Crests, and Devices, hung upon the Barriers, Trees, Tents, and Pavilions, near to the Places of Justing; and that, on the sides of these Shields, they were wont to place their Pages, Armour-bearers, and Servants, clothed in fancied dresses, sometimes making them appear like Savages, Saracens, Moors, Syrens, &c. and sometimes disguising them in the skins of Lions, Bears, &c. in order to guard the Shield, and to take an account of the Name and Arms of the Knight who accepted the Challenge.” But a late ingenious and erudite Antiquary, Mr. Antis, “the great Luminary of Heraldic Science,” is of opinion, that Supporters owe their origin to the whim or taste of Seal Engravers; — “who in cutting on Seals Shields of Arms, which were in a triangular form, and placed in a circle, finding a vacant space at each side, and also at the top of the Shield, thought it an ornament to fill up the spaces with Vine-branches, Garbs, Trees, Flowers, Plants, Ears of Corn, Feathers, Fret-work, Lions, Wiverns, or some other animal, according to their fancy.” We cannot, however, entirely fall in with this idea. It is not probable that badges so highly honourable as are Supporters, should owe their existence to a circumstance so truly insignificant, or that King Henry VIII. when he granted Supporters to the Peers of each degree, and to the Knights of the Garter and the Bath, granted them as an offspring of so mean a parentage. Be this as it may, in England Supporters are worn only by the Sovereign, the Princes of the Blood Royal, Peers of the Realm, and the Knights Companions of the Garter

xiv INTRODUCTION TO HERALDRY.

Garb and Bath, unless Royal Licence be especially had and obtained for that purpose: Even the Baronets of England are not, by their original institution, authorized to bear them: Nevertheless, the Baronets of Nova-Scotia are, by their Patent of Creation, allowed to carry Supporters.—As ensigns of dignity, Supporters take precedence of Crests, and even of Arms themselves. They are not assumable, nor can they, according to the Heraldic Law, be alienated or changed without Royal Licence. Peereesses in their own right have an undoubted claim to Supporters; but it seems to be a disputable point, whether any other Woman is entitled to the same honour.

MOTTOES are supposed to have originated in the WAR-CRIES of the Antients; which are said to have been, in early times, painted on the Shields of Warriors. At present, however, few traces remain of such an origin; some quaint allusion to the surname, some remarkable circumstance in the family, or some favourite sentiment of the first bearer, seem to have given existence to the present List of MOTTOES. The Institution of the Order of the Garter introduced them into this country, as armorial accompaniments. They may be assumed, changed, or relinquished at pleasure. Women, even Peereesses in their own right, are not permitted by the Law Heraldic to use MOTTOES or Crests.

CROWNS are the emblems of Sovereignty. Anciently, they were only plain Fillets of Gold; and after they had received many ornamental additions, they still remained open at the top. Edward IV. appears to be the first King of England who wore a Crown inclosed at the top with Arches. This ancient Crown is said to be the Archetype of the present CROWN OF ENGLAND, which was made for the Coronation of Charles II. and is appropriated solely to the use of Crowning the Sovereigns of Great Britain. Besides this there is a CROWN OF STATE, also made for Charles II. worn by the King in Parliament. Both these Crowns are enriched with Jewels of immense value: One single Ruby set in the middle of one of the Crosses of the Crown of State, is valued at Ten Thousand Pounds! The QUEEN, too, has her CROWN and her CIRCLET OF GOLD: The former is kept for the Coronation of Queens Consort; the latter is worn in proceeding to that Ceremony. Sovereign Queens are not crowned with what is called the QUEEN'S CROWN, but with the CROWN OF ENGLAND. The Imperial CROWN OF SCOTLAND (all royal Crowns are styled imperial) is still in preservation; having been deposited, at the Union, in the Crown-Room within the Castle of Edinburgh. The DEMI-CROWN, or CORONET OF THE PRINCE OF WALES, is differenced from the imperial Crown of England principally by having only two instead of four Bars or Arches. See Plate C.

CORONETS are the Ensigns of Nobility; the different degrees of which are marked by the Construction of the Coronet. Those of the PRINCES OF THE BLOOD ROYAL are differenced from that of the PRINCE OF WALES by the absence of the Arches, and by having, instead of four Crosses pattée, only two Crosses and two Leaves and four Fleurs-de-lis. The Coronet of a DUKE (not of the Blood Royal) has eight Leaves (called Strawberry Leaves) placed upon the Rim or Circle of Gold of which all Crowns and Coronets are composed. That of a MARQUIS has four Leaves and four Pearls Pearls placed upon low Points alternately with the Leaves; the Pearls and Leaves being of equal height. The Coronet of an EARL has eight Pearls elevated upon tall Points, with eight Leaves sitting alternately at their Bases. That of the VISCOUNT is differenced by an uncertain number of Pearls placed immediately upon the Rim of the Coronet, without being raised upon Points: Twelve is the usual number of those Pearls. The BARON'S Coronet has six Pearls only, placed likewise immediately upon the Rim of Gold. One Cap is common to all the Coronets; namely, Crimson Velvet lined with sarsenet, and turned up with Ermine, on the Top a Tassel of Gold. How long the Coronets above enumerated, the last excepted, have been in use as distinguishing marks of Nobility, is uncertain: The Coronet of the Barons is of late date. Formerly the Cap was their only Badge of Distinction. They owe their Circlet of Gold, and their Pearls, to Charles II.

The MITRE is the Badge of EPISCOPACY: The Bishops and Archbishops bear one and the same emblem.

The ARMS OF ULSTER, or, as they are familiarly called, the BLOODY HAND, is the Badge of BARONETAGE. This Device was granted by James I. at the Institution of that Order, in memory of the expedient, or the pretence, under which it was instituted; namely, the protection of the Province of Ulster in Ireland. These Arms are blazoned Ar. a Sinister Hand couped and erect gu. By the Rules of Heraldry, they ought to be borne on an Escutcheon placed on the Centre, or in Chief, of the paternal Coat of the Bearer. See Plate C.

The ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD in these Kingdoms are four:—

The GARTER,
The BATH,

The THISTLE, and
St. PATRICK.

STARS or BADGES, embroidered upon the left breast of the coat;—MOTTOS placed round the paternal Arms;—and RIBBONS passing across the breast, from the left shoulder to the right hip, suspending COLLAR-BADGES of the respective Order, are the ordinary Distinguishments of Knights Companions of these honourable Orders. For the Stars and Mottos, see Plate C. The Collar-Badge of the GARTER is the well-known Figure of St. George: That of the BATH is a Rose and a Thistle issuing from a Scepter, all between three imperial Crowns: That of the THISTLE is the image of St. Andrew; and that of St. PATRICK is a Harp crowned, pendant to which is a Cross Saltier charged with a Trefoil surcharged with three Crowns, within a Bordure charged with Trefoil. The RIBBON of the GARTER is dark blue;—of the BATH, red;—of the THISTLE, green;—and of St. PATRICK, a lighter blue.

Thus much as to the Honours and Distinctions of the Living. It now remains to decypher Heraldic Hieroglyphics as they pertain to the Dead; such at least as occur upon

FUNERAL ACHIEVEMENTS.

THE HATCHMENT, or FUNERAL ACHIEVEMENT, usually placed over the door of a person of distinction deceased, not only declares that "Death has been within these walls," but points out the sex, and conjugal connexion, as well as the dignity and armorial distinctions of the defunct. These circumstances are denoted by the Form and Accompaniments of the Field, and the Colour of the Ground of the Hatchment: Thus,

FOR A BACHELOR, — the paternal Arms are painted upon a SHIELD, and accompanied with HELMET, CREST, and MOTTO, and with the Ground of the Hatchment (namely, the vacant canvass on each side of the Shield) all black.

FOR A SINGLE WOMAN, — the paternal Arms are painted upon a Lozenge, with no other accompaniment, or ornament, than a Gold-Cord, loosely knotted, encompassing the Field: The Ground, in this case, is also all black.

FOR A WIDOW, — the paternal Arms of the defunct are impaled with those of her late Husband, in a Lozenge, with a fancy gold-ornament round it; but with no other accompaniment: The Ground all black.

FOR A MARRIED WOMAN LEAVING A HUSBAND, — her paternal Arms impaled with those of her Husband, are painted upon a SHIELD, without the armorial Accompaniment; the sides of the Shield being only ornamented. In this case, the sinister side of the ground is black, to denote the Death of the Wife; the dexter side white, to shew that the Husband is living.

FOR A MARRIED MAN LEAVING A WIDOW, — the Arms as before, upon a SHIELD, with the Accompaniments of Helmet, Crest, and Motto: the dexter side of the Ground, in this case, being black; the sinister, white.

FOR A MAN WHO DIES, LEAVING A SECOND WIFE, — his SHIELD of Arms (not impaled) together with the Accompaniments, are painted upon a black Ground. On the dexter side of the Shield is placed a small funeral Escutcheon, bearing his paternal Coat impaled with that of his first wife, the sinister side of this Escutcheon being black, to denote her death; and on the sinister side of the Shield is placed another Escutcheon, bearing his Arms impaled with those of his second Wife; the dexter side of this Escutcheon being painted black, to denote his Death; the sinister white, to shew that his second Wife is still living.

THE PEER is distinguished by his Coronet and Supporters:

THE BARONET, by his Badge:

THE KNIGHT COMPANION, by the Motto of his Order:

And the BISHOP by his Mitre. In this case it is observable, that as, by the Rules of Heraldry, the Arms of the Office take precedence of those of the Holder, the Arms of the Diocese are always impaled on the dexter side, those of the Bishop on the sinister side, of the Escutcheon; consequently on the Hatchment for a Bishop the sinister, and not the dexter side of the Ground is painted black.

1784.

BLOOD-ROYAL.

PRINCE OF WALES, DUKE OF CORNWALL, &c.

TITLES. THE Most High, Puissant, and most Illustrious Prince, GEORGE-AUGUSTUS-FREDERICK, Prince of Great-Britain, Prince of Wales, Electoral Prince of Brunswick-Lunenburg, Duke of Cornwall and Rothesay, Earl of Chester and Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, Great Steward of Scotland, Knight of the Garter, &c. &c.

BORN, August 12, 1762.

CREATED Prince of Wales, Aug. 17, 1762, and Earl of Chester by the same letters-patent, with the usual limitation; and in 1765 elected a Knight Companion of the most noble Order of the Garter, and installed at Windsor July 25, 1771. He took his seat in the House of Peers, as Duke of Cornwall and Earl of Chester, in November 1783.

The first creation of a Duke in England was by a charter, dated March 13, 1337, by King Edward III. in favour of his son Edward, surnamed the Black Prince, wherein he was declared Duke of Cornwall, to hold to himself and his heirs, Kings of England, and to their first-born sons; by virtue of which the eldest son of the King of England is Duke of Cornwall the moment he is born.

The Earldom of Chester was a creation by letters-patent by Henry III. in 1247, and annexed to the eldest son of the King of England for ever. Prince Edward his eldest son was created Earl thereof, and the title has been enjoyed by all his successors.

The title of Prince of Wales, after the reduction of the British Prince Llewelyn, and the incorporation of that Principality with England, was first conferred upon Prince Edward, the infant son of Edward I. in June 1284; ever since which time the Principality has always been under the government of the English; and notwithstanding the title of Prince of Wales has been several times merged in the Crown, yet it was never bestowed but on the Heir to the Throne.

As presumptive heir to the Crown of Great-Britain, he is Hereditary Steward of Scotland, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, and Baron of Renfrew; titles settled in 1399 by Robert III. King of Scotland on the Prince his eldest son; perpetually appropriating those titles to the future Princes of Scotland, as soon as born; and from the accession of James I. they have been continued by the Princes of England.

DESCENT AND FAMILY CONNEXIONS. By tracing the origin of this ancient and illustrious House, we are enabled to declare it descended from the lines of Witekind the Great, the first Duke of Saxony, in 807; Pharamond Duke of the Franks, ancestor of the Whelphish or Guelphish line, in 404; Caius Aetius, a noble Roman family, in 390, ancestor of the house of Este; and Herman Billung, Duke of Saxony, in 960; the representative of all of whom centered in Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria, in 1190; who married Maud, the daughter of Henry II. King of England, lineally descended from Egbert the first King of England, in 819. From this marriage descended the families of Brunswick, Grubenhagen, Gottingen, Lunenburg, Calenburg, Wolfenbittel, Harburg, Zelle, Giffhorn, and Danneburg. The representative of the house of Brunswick-Lunenburg, by his marriage with Sophia, daughter of Frederick King of Bohemia, by Elizabeth, youngest daughter of James I. of England, had a son (George) who, on the decease of Queen Anne, by virtue of the Act of Settlement, ascended the throne of Great-Britain. The issue of George I. by his uncle's daughter, (the heiress of Zelle) was George II. and Sophia-Dorothy; who, by her marriage with Frederick II. King of Prussia, was mother of the present King of Prussia, the greatest hero of this age. George II. married Wilhelmina-Carolina, daughter of John-Frederick, Margrave of Anspach, by whom (who died 1737) he had the following issue, and died Oct. 25, 1760.

1. Frederick-Lewis, late Prince of Wales.
2. Anne, born Oct. 22, 1709, married March 14, 1734, William-Charles-Henry, Prince of Nassau and Orange, by whom she had the present Prince of Nassau and Orange; and his sister Wilhelmina-Carolina, married to the Prince of Nassau-Weilburg; both of whom have issue.
3. Amelia-Sophia-Eleanora, born May 30, 1711, and remains unmarried.
4. Elizabeth-Caroline, born May 30, 1713; died unmarried Dec. 28, 1757.

6. William-Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, born April 15, 1721; died unmarried, Oct. 31, 1765.
7. Mary, born Feb. 22, 1723; married the present Prince of Hesse-Cassel, May 8, 1740, by whom she had issue three sons; the two eldest married their cousins, two Princesses of Denmark, sisters to the present King of Denmark, and have issue; and their mother died 1771.
8. Louisa, born Dec. 7, 1724; married Nov. 30, 1743, to Frederick V. the late King of Denmark, by whom she had the present King of Denmark, and three daughters; the eldest of whom is married to the present King of Sweden, Sweden, by whom she has issue; and the other two daughters married their cousins, Princes of Hesse-Cassel, and have issue.

FREDERICK-LEWIS, late Prince of Wales, was born Jan. 20, 1707; married April 27, 1736, Augusta, daughter of Frederick II. Duke of Saxe-Gotha, and aunt of the present Duke; by whom (who died Feb. 8, 1772) he had the following issue; and died March 20, 1751, during the life-time of his father.

1. Augusta, born July 31, 1737, married to the present Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel, Jan. 17, 1764, by whom she has issue three sons and three daughters; the eldest of which daughters is married to a Prince of Wirtemberg, brother to the Grand Dukes of Russia.

He was, by letters-patent, on April 20, 1751, created Prince of Wales, and on the death of his royal grandfather George II. ascended the throne of Great-Britain Oct. 25, 1760. His Majesty was married Sept. 8, 1761, to Sophia-Charlotte, Princess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, sister of the present Duke; and their Majesties were crowned the 22d of the same month. 1. Mary, born in June 1742, and died unmarried in Nov. 1756.

2. Catharine, who died young.

3. Charles, the present Earl of Surry, born March 15, 1746, was married, July 7, 1767, to Mary-Anne, sole daughter and heiress of John Coppinger, Esq. of Ballyvolane in the county of Cork in Ireland, who died in child-bed May 28, 1768, without issue. He married, 2dly, on April 2, 1771, Frances, only daughter and heiress of the late Charles Fitzroy Scudamore, of Home-Lacy, Esq. in Herefordshire, by the repudiated Duchess of Beaufort (only daughter and heiress of James Viscount Scudamore of Ireland), by whom he has no issue.

CONNEXIONS. Edward, the eighth and late Duke of Norfolk, who died Sept. 20, 1777, without issue, was descended from Henry, the second son of Henry-Frederick, Earl of Arundel, who died in 1652. His Grace's youngest brother Philip had several sons, all of whom died unmarried before their uncle Edward; and two daughters; one of whom married Lord Stourton, and is dead; and the other married Lord Petre, is now living, and has issue.

His Grace Charles, the present and ninth Duke, is descended from a grandson of Charles, fourth son of the said Earl of Arundel, who died March 31, 1713; which fourth son had settled at Greytroke in Cumberland, where this branch of the family has since remained.

His Grace's father, Charles Howard, Esq. of Greytroke in Cumberland, who died June 10, 1720, married the daughter of John Aylward, Esq. (descended from the Aylwards of Waterford in Ireland) who died Oct. 2, 1747, by whom he had three sons and three daughters; all of whom died unmarried, except Charles the present Duke. His Grace succeeded to the titles on the death of Edward, his distant cousin, the late Duke.

DESCENT. The direct male line of this noble family owes its present elevation principally to the law. A female branch, however, reaches a much higher source.

King Edward the First had a son named Thomas de Brotherton (from Brotherton, a village in Yorkshire, where he was born), whose daughter Margaret was by Richard the Second created Duchess of Norfolk. Thomas de Mowbray, who was made hereditary Earl-Marshal of England, was grandson of this Margaret, and became Duke of Norfolk. He had two daughters, Margaret and Isabel, the former of whom married Sir Robert Howard.

6 DUKE OF SOMERSET.

Sir William Howard (said to be descended from the Earls of Passy in Normandy, part of which family came into England with the Conqueror in 1066, and becoming possessed of the castle of Howard in Wales, took the surname of Howard) was a celebrated Judge of the Common Pleas about the year 1300; and is lineal ancestor of the abovementioned Sir Robert Howard, who had a son, Sir John Howard.

This Sir John Howard (grandson of Thomas de Mowbray, grandson of Thomas de Brotherton, grandson of King Edward the First and a daughter of Philip the Hardy, King of France) was, on June 28, 1483, created, by Richard the Third, Earl-Marshal of England, and Duke of Norfolk. His son Thomas at the same time was created Earl of Surry; and from him are lineally descended (after several attainders and restorations) the present Duke of Norfolk; also the Earls of Effingham, Suffolk, and Carlisle.

HEIR-APPARENT. Charles, Earl of Surry, son of the present Duke. In case the present Earl of Surry dies without issue male, the honours will devolve on Henry Howard, of Sheffield, Esq. and his heirs.

DESCENT. This is a Norman family, which shared the good fate of the Conqueror,

William

William de St. Maur (derived from St. Mauro in Normandy) was a warrior in the days of Henry III. and progenitor of Sir Joan Seymour, whose daughter Jane was wife to Henry VIII. and mother of Edward VI. and whose second son Edward was, in 1546, created (during the minority of Edward VI.) Baron Seymour, and Duke of Somerset, with limitations to his heirs-male by his second wife; remainder to his heirs-male by his first wife.

Algernon, the seventh Duke of Somerset, lineally descended from Edward the first Duke by his second wife, died in 1750, possessed of five distinct titles; namely, Duke of Somerset, &c.; Earl of Northumberland, &c.; Earl of Egremont, &c.; Earl of Hertford, &c. and Baron Percy. But dying without heir-male, the titles of Duke of Somerset, &c. devolved on the late Duke, who was lineally descended from Edward the first Duke by his first wife.

His Grace's grandfather, Sir Edward Seymour, Bart. had four sons and eight daughters, by whom his Grace is distantly allied to the present Earl of Sandwich, and a great many Commoners.

The Marquis was summoned to Parliament in May 1776, by the title of Baron Osborne of Kiveton, and takes precedence according to the date of that Barony.

CONNEXIONS. His Grace's father, Peregrine-Hyde, the late and third Duke, (who was born Nov. 11, 1691, and Jan. 31, 1713, was summoned to Parliament as Lord Osborne of Kiveton) succeeded his father. He married 1st Elizabeth Harley, daughter to Robert Earl of Oxford; and by her, who died Nov. 20th, 1713, aged 28, he had a son Thomas, now Duke, of whom she died in child-bed. By his second wife, Anne (who died Nov. 27, 1722), third daughter to Charles Duke of Somerset, he had a son who died young; and in April 1725, he married to his third wife, Juliana, daughter and co-heiress to Roger Hele, of Halewell in the county of Devon, Esq. by whom he had no issue; and who afterwards married Charles Earl of Portmore.

DESCENT. This was a Kentish family of some note so early as the year 1400; but owes the foundation of its greatness to one spirited act.

Edward Osborne, being apprentice to Sir William Hewit, a considerable merchant in London, saved the life of Sir William's only daughter, who had fallen when a child from the window of his house on London-bridge into the Thames, by throwing himself into the river, and bringing her safe to land. Sir William, who was a man of great estate, afterwards gave him this daughter in marriage. Sir Edward served the office of Sheriff and Lord Mayor of London; he was also Member of Parliament for the City, and received the honour of Knighthood in 1582.
office

Sir Thomas Osborne, Bart. great-grandson of this Sir Edward, being instrumental in the Restoration of Charles II. was by that King made Treasurer of the Navy, a Privy-Counsellor, and Lord High Treasurer of England. He likewise conferred on him, in 1673, the honours of Baron Osborne, and Viscount Latimer; also, 1673, Viscount Dumblain; and in 1674, Earl of Danby. He was likewise a principal instrument in bringing about the Revolution; and, among other favours conferred on him by the Prince and Princess of Orange, was in 1689 created Marquis of Caermarthen; and in 1694, Duke of Leeds.

Peregrine, the second Duke, succeeded his father in 1712.

Peregrine-Hyde, the third Duke, succeeded his father in 1729.

Thomas, the fourth and present Duke, succeeded his father May 9, 1731.

HEIR-APPARENT. Francis-Godolphin, Marquis of Caermarthen, son of the present Duke.

CONNEXIONS. His Grace's grandfather, John late Duke of Bedford, born September 30, 1710, on Oct. 11, 1731, married Lady Diana Spencer, sister to the late Duke of Marlborough, by whom he had issue a son, Francis, who died the 6th of Nov. 1732, the day he was born, and her Grace died on the 27th of Sept. 1735. In April 1737, his Grace married, 2dly, Gertrude, eldest daughter of John Earl Gower, sister to the present Earl, by whom he had issue, Carolina, born in January 1743, married August 23, 1762, to George present Duke of Marlborough, and has issue.—A son, born 1745, who died an infant.—Francis Marquis of Tavistock, born Sept. 26, 1739, who died March 22, 1767, by a fall from his horse, having married June 7, 1764, Elizabeth, daughter of William-Anne, Earl of Albemarle, and sister to the present Viscount Keppel, who died in October 1768, and left three sons; Francis, the present Duke.—John, born July 6, 1766.—William, born August 20, 1767.

DESCENT. This is a very ancient Dorsetshire family; John Russel being Constable of Corfe castle in the year 1221. Like the family of Leeds, however, it owes its rise to a mere incident.

Philip Archduke of Austria, and son of the Emperor Maximilian, being forced into Weymouth by a violent storm at sea about the year 1500, was accommodated by Sir Thomas Trenchard; who invited Mr. John Russel (his relation) to wait upon the Archduke. Philip was so much pleased with the polite manner and conversation of Mr. Russel, that he recommended him to Henry VI. who took him into favour.

Henry

DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE. 15

Henry VIII. who employed him on many important occasions, created him, in 1539, Baron Russel of Cheney; and on the dissolution of the Monasteries, granted him the rich Abbey of Tavistock, with divers manors, townships, and lands, in the counties of Devon, Somerset, and Bucks. In 1550, his honours were encreased during the minority of Edward VI. to Earl of Bedford.

This was the principal title of the family, until William the fifth Earl, and father of the magnanimous William Lord Russel, was by William and Mary, whose cause he had espoused, created in 1694 Marquis of Tavistock, and Duke of Bedford.

Wriothesley, the second Duke (son of William Lord Russel) succeeded his grandfather Sept. 7, 1700. From marriages with his Grace's daughters are descended the present Duke of Bridgewater and the Earl of Effex.

Wriothesley, the third Duke, succeeded his father in 1711.

DESCENT. This family is descended from the Gurnons, an ancient family in Normandy. Robert de Gurnon, sharing the good fate of the Norman Conqueror, became possessed of several Lordships in Hertfordshire and other counties: from him descended Roger de Gurnon, who having acquired the Lordship of Cavendish, in Suffolk, by marriage, his sons took the surname of Cavendish.

From this Roger de Gurnon descended Sir John Cavendish, who killed Wat Tyler, in 1381; also Sir William Cavendish, who was one of the first colonizers of Virginia and Bermudas, and who, in 1605, was created by James I. Baron Cavendish, of Hardwick; as also, in 1618, by the same King, Earl of Devonshire.

This was the leading honour of the family, until William, the fourth and celebrated Earl of Devonshire, being principally instrumental in bringing about the Revolution, was May 12, 1694, created by William and Mary (after having conferred on him almost every temporary honour in their power) Marquis of Hartington, and Duke of Devonshire.

DESCENT. This is a Norman family. Robert le Despencer (or Robert the Steward) was Steward to the Conqueror, and was progenitor of Robert Spencer, whom Queen Elizabeth made a Knight, and James I. in 1603, Baron Spencer. Henry, his grandson, was in 1643 created, by Charles I. Earl of Sunderland.

This was the principal title of the Spencer family until Charles the late and fifth Earl became heir to the Dukedom of Marlborough in the following manner:

His Grace, among many other honours conferred on his merit, was created Baron Churchill, Earl of Marlborough, Marquis of Blandford, and Duke of Marlborough; with remainder to the heirs male of his daughters. The titles consequently devolved on Charles Earl of Sunderland, as eldest surviving grandson of John Duke of Marlborough.

George, the present and third Duke, succeeded his father the late Duke in 1758.

HEIR-APPARENT. George, Marquis of Blandford, the Duke's eldest son.

DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

TITLES. THE Most Noble HUGH PERCY, Duke and Earl of NORTHUMBERLAND, Earl Percy, Baron Warkworth of Warkworth Castle. His Grace was Jan. 30, 1784, created Lord

Lovaine,

DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND. 127

Lovaine, Baron of Alnwick in the county of Northumberland, with remainder to his second son Lord Algernon Percy, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten. He is also a Baronet, and a Knight of the Garter.

BORN,

A WIDOWER.

His Grace, then Sir Hugh Smithson, Bart. having married, July 18, 1740, Lady Elizabeth Seymour, daughter, and at length sole heir of Algernon Duke of Somerset, who died Feb. 7, 1750, succeeded to the Earldom of Northumberland, and Barony of Warkworth; as did his Lady to the Baronies of Percy, Lucy, Poinings, Fitz-Payne, Bryan, and Latimer, which the said Duke had inherited from his mother Elizabeth, daughter and sole heir of Josceline Percy, the eleventh and last Earl of Northumberland, who died in 1670.

Sir Hugh, now become Earl of Northumberland, by Act of Parliament passed in the year 1750 took upon him the name and arms of Percy; and was afterwards advanced to the dignities of Earl Percy, and Duke of Northumberland, by patent, Oct. 18, 1766. By his consort, who died Dec. 5, 1776, aged 60, his Grace had issue, two sons, and one daughter, viz. Hugh, Earl Percy, born Aug. 14, 1742; who married, 1st, July 2, 1764, Lady Anne Stuart, third daughter of John Earl of Bute, by whom he had no issue, and from whom he was divorced in 1779; and, 2dly, May 25, 1779, Miss Frances-Julia Burrell, third daughter of Peter Burrell, of Beckenham in Kent, Esq. by whom he hath had issue, 1. Charlotte Percy, born July 3, 1780, who died May 3, 1781; 2. Elizabeth Percy, born Dec. 23, 1781; and, 3. another daughter, born May 1783. His Lordship succeeding to his mother's Baronies, is to be seen among the English Barons. Vide HUGH, BARON PERCY, &c.

Elizabeth-Anne-Frances Percy, born April 6, 1744, died May 27, 1761, unmarried.

Lord Algernon Percy, born Jan. 21, 1750, married June 8, 1775, Miss Isabella-Sufanna Burrell, second daughter of Peter Burrell, Esq. above mentioned; by whom he has had issue, 1. Elizabeth-Sufanna, born Dec. 29, 1782; 6, 7. two sons (twins) born Jan. 30, 1784.

CONNEXIONS. His Grace's father Langdale Smithson, (second son of Sir Hugh Smithson of Yorkshire, the third Baronet of the family, by a daughter of Marmaduke, second Lord Langdale) married Philadelphia, daughter of William Revelly of Newby-Wick, in Yorkshire, and dying in his father's life-time, left a daughter Dorothy, who died unmarried, and Hugh the present Duke. His Grace is therefore entirely destitute of relations, excepting his own sons and their connexions.

DESCENT. This is a Yorkshire family. John De Smythton had lands in Smithton near Thirsk, in the reign of Edward I. (about 1287). From him descended Anthony Smithson, who married the heiress of Anthony Catherick, Esq. of Stanwick, which has since been the chief residence of the family. From his son Hugh, whom King Charles II. created a Baronet, descended the present Duke of Northumberland.

Earl of Northumberland is a very ancient title. Waltheof enjoyed it about the year 1000. King David of Scotland was, before his accession,

Earl

Earl of Northumberland. It was held by the Percy family through several generations. The Earldom, however, was at length forfeited; but the Barony remained in the Percy family, until it became vested by marriage in Algernon Duke of Somerset; who, among other honours, had conferred on him, by George II. in 1749, the Earldom of Northumberland, with remainder to Sir Hugh Smithson of Stanwick, in the county of York, Bart. his then son-in-law.

HEIR-APPARENT. Hugh, Earl and Baron Percy, succeeds his father in the Dukedom, Earldom, and Barony of Warkworth: and Lord Algernon Percy succeeds to the Barony of Alnwick, by particular grant.

ARMS AND MOTTO. See Plate 5.

DUKE OF MONTAGU.

BORN, July 26, 1712.

His Grace married July 7, 1730, Mary Montagu, (sister to the Duchess-Dowager of Buccleugh, in Scotland) youngest daughter; and one of the co-heirs of John Duke of Montagu; after whose decease, in 1749, his Grace, on Oct. 8, 1776, took the name and arms of Montagu. The Duchess died May 2, 1775, having had issue, John, Marquis of Monthermer, born March 18, 1735, created May 7, 1762, Baron Montagu of Boughton, and died April 11, 1770, unmarried; by whose death that Barony is extinct.—Elizabeth, born May 29, 1743, married March 20, 1767, to the Duke of Buccleugh, and has issue.—Mary, born Sept. 6, 1750, died June 28, 1761.—Henrietta, born July 11, 1753, and died April 10, 1766.

CONNEXIONS. His Grace's father, George Brudenell, the third Earl of Cardigan, married Elizabeth Bruce, eldest daughter to Thomas the last Earl of Aylesbury; and dying on the 5th of July, 1732, by her, who died in Dec. 1745, left issue four sons and two daughters: Frances, married July 27, 1749, to Oliver Tilson, Esq.—Mary, married, 1st, to Richard Powis, Esq. DESCENT. This appears to be an English family of long standing. William Brudenell was possessed of lands in Oxon, Bucks, and Berks, in the time of Edward I. (about 1300.) From him descended Thomas Brudenell

MARCHIONESS DE GREY. 29

Brudenell of Dean, who, June 29, 1611, was, by James I. created a Baronet; in 1627, by Charles I. Baron Brudenell; and April 20, 1661, by Charles II. Earl of Cardigan.

This was the principal title of the family until George, the fourth Earl and present Duke, having married the daughter of the late Duke of Montagu, and on his decease having taken the surname of Montagu, was, by his present Majesty George III. created Oct. 28, 1766, Marquis of Monthermer and Duke of Montagu.

John, late Duke of Montagu, his Grace's father-in-law, was the son of Ralph the first Duke. He married the youngest co-heiress of John the great Duke of Marlborough, by whom he had six children; all of whom died young, except Isabel, who married the second Duke of Manchester (uncle of the present Duke), and Mary the late Duchess of Montagu.

HEIR-APPARENT. The Dukedom and Marquisate will become extinct on the death of the present Duke without male issue; but the Earldom of Cardigan will descend to James, brother of the present Duke, lately created Baron Brudenell.

Her Ladyship's grandfather, Henry Earl and Duke of Kent, married, 1st, Jemima, eldest daughter of Thomas Lord Crewe of Stone, and by her (who died July 27, 1728) had four sons and seven daughters.—Anthony, born Feb. 21, 1695-6, married Ap. 17, 1718, to Mary Tufton, fourth daughter of Thomas Earl of Thanet, and died July 21, 1723, and his Lady married John Earl Gower.—Henry, born April 1, 1697, died Dec. 4, 1717.—Lucas died young.—George died young.—Amabella married 1721, John Campbell, Earl of Breadalbane in Scotland. and and died in February following.—Anne-Sophia, born Jan. 17, 1730, married 1768 Dr. John Egerton, Bishop of Durham, eldest son of Henry late Bishop of Hereford, brother to the first Duke of Bridgwater.

His Grace (May 9, 1740) was created a Marquis of Great-Britain, by the title of Marquis De Grey, with remainder to the present Marchioness and her heirs male.

DESCENT. This noble family is descended from Rollo, Chamberlain to Robert Duke of Normandy, who conferred upon him the castle and honour of Croy in Picardy, from whence the family derive their name. A daughter of this Rollo, named Arlotta, was mother of William the Conqueror; and another son, named John, by marriage became possessed of divers lands in Oxford and Bucks, during the reign of William the Conqueror. John's grandson married the daughter and heiress of Baldwin Earl of Devon, whose grandson, when Archbishop of York, gave York-house (now Whitehall) to that see. The opulence of this family excited disputes between Reginald de Grey and Owen Glendower, in the reign of Henry VI. Edward, Reginald's eldest son by his second wife, married the daughter and heir of the Ferrers of Groby, and bore the titles of Ferrers and Grey of Groby, and his descendants are Earls of Stamford. John, the eldest son by his first wife, dying during the life-time of Reginald his father, left a son Edmund, who by Edward IV. was created Earl of Kent, and married a daughter of Percy Earl of Northumberland, by whom he had George second Earl of Kent, ancestor of the tenth Earl of Pembroke and the first Earl of Thanet; and dying in 1506, was succeeded by a regular succession of Earls of Kent till 1639, when, on failure of male issue, it descended to Anthony de Grey, descended from the third son of George the second Earl. A grandson of Anthony, named Anthony, married the daughter and sole heir of Lord Lucas, Baron of Shenfield, who was created Baroness Lucas of Crudwell in Wilts, on May 7, 1663, and to her heirs male and female by Anthony Earl of Kent. From this Anthony the title descended to Henry his son, the thirteenth Earl of Kent, and the first who enjoyed the title of Duke; which titles became extinct on his death, June 5, 1740-41; but the title of Marchioness De Grey, created by letters-patent May 9, 1740, descended to his grand-daughter, the present Marchioness.

HEIR-APPARENT. If the present Lady dies without issue male, the Marquisate will be extinct; the Barony of Lucas, as a title in fee, will be in abeyance between her Ladyship's two daughters, the widow of the late Lord Polwarth, and the Lady of the present Lord Grantham.

BORN, Dec. 11, 1719.

MARRIED, Nov. 21, 1753, Elizabeth, daughter of John present Lord Dormer, but has no issue.

CONNEXIONS. His Lordship's father, George, fourteenth Earl of Shrewsbury, married March 11, 1719, Mary, daughter of Thomas Viscount Fitzwilliam, and died on Dec. 12, 1733. By his Lady (who died Sept. 20, 1752) he had issue, George, present Earl.—Charles, who married Mary, daughter and co-heir of Robert Allwyn, Esq. and by her (who died in child-bed June 8, 1750) he had a daughter Mary, born June 2, 1750. He died April 11, 1766, leaving his Lady with child.—John-Talbot, who died unmarried April 5, 1751.—James.—Thomas.—Francis, who April 20, 1761, married Lady Anne Belasyse, daughter of Thomas Earl of Fauconberg, who died Sept. 13, 1768, without issue; and he married, 2dly, May 18, 1772, Margaret-Frances, only daughter of William Sheldon, Esq. of Weston in Warwickshire, by whom he has issue, 1. DESCENT. The origin of this family is prior to the Norman Conquest; one of whom, named Richard, was witness to a grant to the monks of Ceraise in Normandy, in the reign of William I. From this Richard, in the seventh descent, was Gilbert, who about 1250 married Gundalina, a daughter to Rheese Ap Griffith, Prince of Wales, and assumed the arms of that Prince, which the family still continues. His son Richard was one of the Barons who asserted the right of Edward I. over Scotland; and his son Sir Gilbert was one of the murderers of Piers Gaveston, and had his pardon for the same; yet soon after was one of the Barons who took up arms against Edward II. and was protected by the Parliament. Sir Richard, son of Sir Gilbert, was one of the principal persons who assisted Edward Baliol in obtaining the Crown of Scotland in 1332, and was with Edward III. in the expedition against Calais. His descendants by intermarriages became connected with some of the principal families in the kingdom; particularly Sir Gilbert Talbot, who who died 1419, married for his first wife Joan, daughter of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, son of King Edward III. and heir to her brother Humphrey Earl of Huntingdon; and for his second wife Beatrix, a natural daughter of John I. King of Portugal, and widow of Thomas Earl of Arundel; but had no issue. John, the brother of this Sir Gilbert, became possessed of his estate, and is greatly extolled by our historians. He was May 20, 1442, created Earl of Shrewsbury; and on July 17, 1446, Earl of Waterford and Wexford in Ireland. He was also Steward of England, and a Marshal of France, but was killed by a cannon-ball, July 20, 1453. By his second wife, a daughter of Richard Earl of Warwick, by right of her mother Lady Lisle and Tyes, he had a son John, created Baron Lisle by Henry VI. on July 26, 1444, and Viscount Lisle Oct. 30, 1452; but he was slain at the same time as his father. John his second son, and second Earl of Shrewsbury, had issue by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of James Butler, Earl of Ormond and Wiltshire, several sons. The grandson of Sir John Stanley, named Thomas, was summoned to Parliament in 1456 as Lord Stanley; which Thomas married the sister to the great Earl of Warwick for his first wife, and for his second wife married Margaret, daughter and heir to John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, (great-grandson of Edward III.) and mother of Henry VII. by whom he had no issue; but was by Henry VII. for his services, created Oct. 27, 1485, Earl of Derby. From him descended Richard de Wentworth, Bishop of London and Chancellor of England, 1338; and whose elder brother, William, was the ancestor of Thomas Wentworth, who married a daughter of Sir William Fleming, of Waith; which Barony was among the titles of the Rockingham branch. From him descended Thomas Wentworth, who received the honour of Knighthood for his bravery at the battle of the Spurs, 1513, and was commonly called Golden Thomas; who paid a fine to be excused from being created a Knight of the Bath; and who in 1526 obtained the uncommon licence of being covered with his bonnet in the presence of Henry VIII. because he was infirm. From him descended his grandson Thomas, who married with the heir of John Nevil, Lord Ferrars of Oversley, and thro' whom this family claim the baronies of Newmarch and Oversley. His successor, William, was created a Baronet June 29, 1611; whose eldest son, Thomas, was the unfortunate Earl of Strafford, beheaded May 12, 1641; and the second son, William, was the ancestor of the present and second Earl; and who, as set forth in the preamb'e to the patent of creation, was descended from John of Gaunt, son of Edward III. and from the ancient Barons of Newmarch and Oversley, &c. His ancestors, either by father or mother, had matched with divers houses of honour; as with Maud, Countess of Cambridge, daughter to the Lord Clifford, of Westmoreland; Margaret, daughter and heir to the Lord Philip de Spencer, the Lords D'Arcy of the North; Latimer, Talboys, Ogle, Ferrars Earl of Derby, Quincy Earl of Winchester, Beaumont Earl of Leicester, Grantmesnil Baron of Hincley and Lord High Steward of England, Peverel Earl of Nottingham, Leofrick Earl of Mercia, and from Margaret Duchess of Somerset, grandmother to Henry VII.

VISCOUNT DUDLEY AND WARD. 119

DESCENT. Few families derive their descent from greater antiquity and dignity; and their connexions by marriages are as eminent as any in the kingdom. His present Lordship is the 15th Inheritor of the seat of Powderham-Castle in Devonshire, from Sir Philip Courtenay, the first of the family resident there; the 16th in succession from Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire, and Margaret his wife, grand-daughter to King Edward I. and the 21st from Reginald de Courtenay, who came into England with King Henry II. There have been several Kings of Jerusalem of this family, as well as Latin Emperors. They derive their descent from Pharamond, founder of the French monarchy, being descended from Lewis VI. King of France, surnamed Le Gros, and as such are of the Blood-Royal of France. Since this family settled in England, fifteen of its descendants have been Barons of Oakhampton; twelve, Earls and Viscounts of Devon; and two, Marquisses of Exeter. Sir William Courtenay received the title of Baronet some time before the Restoration, but declined taking out his patent, as thinking himself entitled to greater dignities; yet in all commissions he was always stiled Baronet by the King.

In the person of the present Lord is a most remarkable circumstance; that of Father, Son, and Grandson, possessing Peerages, and a right of sitting and voting in the House of Peers at one and the same time; his Lordship's grandfather being Duke of Leeds; his father, Baron Osborne; and himself, Baron Conyers.

DESCENT. His Lordship's paternal Descent is already described under the title of his grandfather the DUKE OF LEEDS. His maternal descent is from Norman ancestors, who came into England with William the Conqueror; and their representative, Sir John D'Arcy, had summons to Parliament as a Baron from the 8th of Edward I. 1280, to the 16th of Edward III. 1342; from whom descended Thomas D'Arcy of Chiche, who, the 5th of Edward II. 1312, was called up to the House of Peers by the title of Lord D'Arcy of Chiche, and died 1347. His descendant Philip, his eldest son, died 1419, leaving two daughters: the youngest, Margaret, married Sir John Conyers. John (the youngest son) had a grandson, Thomas, who was by writ of summons called to Parliament by Henry VIII. 1509, and had the Barony revived to him, but was beheaded 1538. His son George was restored by Edward VI. whose descendant Thomas married Elizabeth, daughter of John Lord Conyers, descended from Margaret, daughter of Philip Lord D'Arcy; and dying Nov. 6, 1606, left a successor, Sir Charles, to whom the title of Lord Conyers was confirmed; whose eldest son Conyers was created Earl of Holderness, and was the grandfather of Robert, the 3d Earl, who married the eldest daughter of the Duke of Schonburgh and Leinster, by whom he had the late Marchioness of Lothian, and Robert the late Earl of Holderness; which last dying May 16, 1778, without male issue, the Earldom became extinct; but he was succeeded in the Barony by his only daughter Amelia, the late Baroness Conyers, who was born Oct. 12, 1754; married July 31, 1773, the present Marquis of Caermarthen, and Baron Osborne, from whom she was divorced in May 1779; and June 9, the same year, married, 2dly, John Byron, Esq. eldest son of Admiral Byron, and nephew of Lord Byron, by whom she had issue Sophia-Georgiana, who died an infant. — Two dead-born children. — Augusta-Mary, born Jan. 26, 1783. From John Southwell descended John the younger, ancestor of the present Viscount Southwell in Ireland; and from Robert, the eldest, the present Lord Clifford derives his descent. Maternally, his Lordship derives his descent and honours from William, William the Conqueror's uncle, who had the additional name of Poncius, was Earl of Arques and Thoulouse, and came into England with his nephew. His son Richard married the daughter of Ralph de Toney, of Clifford Castle, Herefordshire, which descended to his issue, who, from that possession being their property, took the name of Clifford. A grand-daughter of this Richard was the celebrated Rosamond, concubine to Henry II. DESCENT. The noble family of Percy is descended from Mainfred, a Norman chieftain, who made irruptions into France in the 9th century; and his posterity settling in Normandy, took their name from their domain of Percy in that province. William de Percy, with his brother Serle, accompanied King William the Conqueror in 1066, from whom he had grants of eighty-six manors in Yorkshire, thirty-two in Lincolnshire, &c. and is expressly stiled a Baron in the records of that and the following reigns. The grandson of this William dying without issue, in the reign of King Henry II. his daughter and heir Agnès de Percy married Josceline de Louvain, son of the Duke of Brabant, and brother to Queen Adeliza, second wife of King Henry I. and by express stipulation took the name of Percy, but retained the arms of Brabant. Josceline was lineally descended from the Sovereigns of Hainault, by a marriage with the daughter and heir of Charles Duke of Louvain, (son of Louis d'Outremer, King of France) the last male descendant of the Emperor Charlemagne, true heir to the Crown of France, usurped by Hugh Capet. From Josceline descended six Lord Percys in lineal succession, when the last of them having intermarried with the Royal Family (Mary Plantagenet) had two sons, who both became Earls, viz. 1. Henry, created Earl of Northumberland, on July 16, 1377, 1 Richard II. and, 2. Thomas, created Earl of Worcester, Sept. 29, 1397, 21 Richard II. but left no issue. Henry Percy, first Earl of Northumberland, was slain in 1408. He left issue by his first wife, Margaret Nevill, three sons; of whom the eldest, Sir Henry Percy, Knt. surnamed Hotspur, the most distinguished chieftain of that age, was slain at Battlefield, near Shrewsbury, 1403, leaving issue by Elizabeth Mortimer (grand-daughter of Lionel Duke of Clarence, son of King Edward III.) one son, Henry, who was second Earl of Northumberland; and one daughter. Henry, first Earl of Northumberland, married, 2dly, (without issue) Maud, Baroness Lucy, Countess Dowager of Angus, who conveyed her great possessions and Baronial honours to this Earl and his posterity. Henry Percy, the second Earl, son of Hotspur, married Eleanor Nevill, grand-daughter of John of Gaunt, by whom he had Henry, the third Earl, who in his father's life-time sat in Parliament as Baron Poynings, having married Eleanor, heiress of that Barony, as also of those of Fitzpayne and Bryan. From him descended Henry Percy, the eighth Earl, &c. who died 1585, leaving issue by Catharine, eldest daughter and coheir of John Lord Latimer, from whom the future Earls took the stile of Barons Latimer. From him descended Josceline Percy, the eleventh and last Earl of the male line Catharine Seymour, wife of Sir William Wyndham, Bart. whose eldest son Charles, Earl of Egremont, had the possessions of the ancient Earls of Northumberland in Sussex, Yorkshire, and Cumberland). Her Grace died in 1722; on which her eldest surviving son, Algernon Seymour (afterwards Duke of Somerset in 1748), took his seat in Parliament as Baron Percy, &c. in 1722. He married Frances, daughter and coheir of Henry Thynne, only son of Thomas first Viscount Weymouth, by whom he had issue only one daughter, and one son, George Viscount Beauchamp; who dying unmarried 1744, all the Baronial honours of her father (together with the estates of the ancient Earls Percy in Middlesex and Northumberland) descended to his only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, late Duchess of Northumberland, mother of the present Baron Percy.

thaniel Newnham, of Streatham, in Surrey, Esq. by whom, who died May 9, 1774, he had the present Lord, who was created a Peer May 20, 1776.

DESCENT. The family of Rythre, Ryther, or Ryder, (for the name has been variously written at different periods) has been long established in Yorkshire, and took their name from Ryther, in the Hundred of Barkston, in that county. It appears from Dugdale's Baronage, that William de Ryther was summoned to Parliament among the Barons of the realm, from the 21st of Edward I. till the 1st of Edward II. and that he was succeeded by John de Rythre, Governor of Shipton-castle; but it does not appear that he, or any of his descendants, was ever summoned to any of our present Parliaments.

John De Grey was Archdeacon of Gloucester, and Bishop of Norwich, in the year 1200; Chief-Justice of England, and afterwards Lord Justice of Ireland. Henry, his nephew, was in great favour with Richard I. as appears from the grant which that Prince made to him of the Manor of Thurrock, in Essex, anno 1194; and it is evident that he continued in favour under King John, not only from the confirmation of this grant, but from a special charter. Henry III. also gave him Grimston Manor, in the county of Nottingham. At his death, he left four sons, viz. 1. Richard, of Codnovre; 2. John, ancestor of the houses of Wilton, Groby, Dorset, and Lisle; 3. Robert, of Rotherfield; 4. William, who was of Langford, in Nottinghamshire, then of Sandiacre, in Derbyshire, afterwards of Gray's Hall, in Cavendish, and Cornarth in Suffolk, which estate still remains in the family; and from this William descended Thomas, the grandfather of the present Lord.

By her Grace's second marriage, his Grace is half brother to the Marquis of Lorn; son-in-law to the present Duke of Argyll; and nephew to the present Earl of Coventry.

DESCENT.

DESCENT. This great family is descended from the ancient House of Douglas, and obtained the title of Hamilton by marriage with the sole heiress of the Hamilton family in 1661, descended from the Earl of Mellent in Normandy, who was created Earl of Leicester by Henry I. in 1103, which family became resident in Scotland about 1323, and created Earl of Angus by Robert II. 1389, Baron Hamilton by James II. in 1445. James, the second Baron Hamilton, was ancestor to the grandmother of Henry Lord Darnley, father of James I. of Great Britain. James, third Baron Hamilton, was, by James IV. of Scotland, in 1503, created Earl of Arran; whose son was declared next immediate heir to that crown, on failure of issue from Mary, mother of James I. which son, being second Earl, was, 1552, by Henry II. of France, created Duke of Châtellerauld in Poitou in France, but neither he nor his heirs ever enjoyed the Duchy; and from him descended the present Earl of Abercorn. In 1599, James VI. of Scotland restored this same James, second Earl, to his forfeited estate and titles, and created him Earl of Hamilton. In 1633, by Charles I. his grandson James was created Duke of Hamilton, which, with several other titles, descended to Anne, heir to the second Duke, who marrying William Douglas Earl of Selkirk, he took the name of Hamilton, and was created Duke 1661. James, his son and successor, on Sept. 10, 1711, was created Baron of Dutton and Duke of Brandon in England by Queen Anne; and was killed fighting a duel with Lord Mohun the same year; and left a son James, the grandfather of the present Duke.

As to the titles of Baron Dutton and Duke of Brandon, the validity of the patent being solemnly debated in the House of Lords, Dec. 30, 1711, it was then adjudged that no Peer of Scotland could be created a Peer of England, as it was declared inconsistent with the articles of the Union, which made all the Peers of Scotland Peers of Great Britain, with the same dignities and privileges, except sitting and voting in the House of Lords, otherwise than by sixteen representatives; and therefore to admit more than sixteen was contrary to the treaty. In 1783, it was again debated in the House of Peers, when the claim was allowed, and his Grace took his seat accordingly, agreeably to his creation.

HEIR-APPARENT. Lord Archibald Hamilton, his Grace's uncle, being son of the second Duke of Brandon, by his third Duchess, born July 27, 1740, married May 25, 1765, Lady Harriot Stuart, daughter of the Earl of Galloway, and has issue.

DESCENT. This family is of Scotch origin. In the reign of Alexander III. and Robert I. we find this family of Scot very powerful on the borders towards England, from which descended Sir Robert, who swore allegiance, in 1269, to Edward I. of England; from it also descended Sir Walter Scot, who was, by James I. of England, on March 16, 1605, advanced to the dignity of Lord Scot, of Buccleugh; and his son Walter, on March 16, 1619, was created Earl of Buccleugh, whose daughter, Anne, on the death of her eldest sister, became Countess of Buccleugh; and, in 1665, married James Fitzroy, Duke of Monmouth, eldest natural son of Charles II. who bore the name of Crofts till his marriage with the above lady, when he became possessed of her fortune, and took the surname of Scot, according to the usage of Scotland in marrying the heiress of an ancient family. On his unfortunate decease, the paternal honours of Duke of Monmouth, Earl of Doncaster, and Baron of Tynedale, to which he had been created Feb. 14, 1663, became forfeited, as well as that of Duke of Buccleugh. The attainder did not take place in Scotland, where the Duchess inherited her honours, having had by the Duke several children. James, the eldest surviving son after his father's death, bore the title of Earl of Dalkeith, and his brother Henry was created, in March 1706, Earl of Deloraine, &c. and was the grandfather of the present Earl. On the death of the Duchess of Buccleugh, in 1731, her grandson Francis, son of the Earl of Dalkeith, succeeded as Duke of Buccleugh; and, in 1743, he was restored to the titles of Earl of Doncaster, and Baron Scot of Tynedale, and was the grandfather of the present Duke.

DESCENT. This family, which took their name from the Barony of Gordon, in Berwickshire, have long resided in North Britain, and a branch of it is of great distinction in Russia. In the reign of Robert Bruce, Adam Gordon had several lands bestowed on him; from whom descended, by a female branch, Alexander Seaton, who took the name of Gordon, and was created Earl of Huntley 1449, whose son George married Jane, daughter of James I. by whom he had no issue; but, by a second Lady, Agnes, daughter of the Earl of Errol, he had three sons and four daughters. Adam, the second son, was the 13th Earl of Sunderland; Janet, his eldest daughter, was wife of Perkin Warbeck, the Impostor; and Alexander, his eldest son, succeeded him; whose son John married Jane, daughter to James IV. from whom descended George, the 6th Earl of Huntley, who was created Marquis of Huntley in 1599. By a daughter of Esme Stewart, Duke of Lenox, he had two sons and four daughters. George, his eldest son, succeeded him, and married Anne daughter to the Earl of Argyll, by whom he had three sons. The eldest died before his father; Charles, the youngest, was created Earl of Aboyne, from whom the present Earl is descended; and Lewis, the second son, succeeded to the title. His son George, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Duke of Norfolk, was created Duke of Gordon by Charles II. 1684; and his son Alexander, was the grandfather of the present Duke.

In December 1685, he married Mary Boyle, second daughter of Charles Lord Clifford, eldest son to Richard Earl of Burlington and Cork, by Jane daughter to William Duke of Somerset; and by her had four sons and five daughters. Of the sons, William, the eldest, was born in May 1696, and died seven months after.—James was born in November 1697, and died before his father.—Charles was born November 24, 1698; in 1707 he was created Earl of Solway, and was the late Duke of Queensbury.—George was born February 1700, and died at Paris in 1724. Paymaster to his Majesty's Forces in Scotland) had James the present Earl, and Isabel, Mary, and Jane; and his Lordship deceasing was succeeded by James, the present Earl of March, and Duke of Queensbury.

DESCENT. This family is of great antiquity; and if a long train of illustrious ancestors, distinguished by the highest titles, and connected with the most noble families in Europe, can make any name remarkable and great, there is no subject can plead a higher claim than THE DOUGLAS; having been honoured with alliances by marriage with the first families in England, Scotland, and France, and matched eleven times with the Royal House of Scotland. They have been Dukes of Scotland, and of Turenne, Counts of Longueville, Marshals of France, &c. They became conspicuous in Scotland in 770, when their progenitor obtained a complete victory for his Sovereign, who had been defeated, for which he was amply rewarded in the county of Lanerk, called DOUGLAS, and from thence came the surname of the family, a branch of which settled in Lombardy in 800. From the elder branch descended William de Douglas, who was created Lord de Douglas by Malcolm Canmore, in 1057; from whom descended William Lord Douglas, who lost his life at the battle of Agincourt, Oct. 25, 1415; the immediate ancestor of William the first Earl of Queensbury, in 1633, the grandfather of the first Duke of Queensbury.

HEIR-APPARENT. If His Grace dies without having male issue, the Dukedom, but no other titles, will descend to the heirs, if any, of William the first Earl.

DESCENT. This is one of those ancient families in Scotland whose origin is of a very early date. Sir Colinmore Campbell was one of those great men summoned to Berwick in August 1291, on the part of Robert Bruce, when King Edward I. of England came there to decide the dispute between the said Robert and John Baliol, for the crown of Scotland. His son, Sir Neil, was one of the Barons in the Parliament held at Air, where they made an intail of the crown to King Robert and his heirs; and the King made him a grant of several lands, and also gave him in marriage his own sister, Margery Bruce; from whom descended Duncan, who was made High Chancellor of Scotland, and had summons to Parliament by the title of Lord Campbell. He married the Lady Margery Stewart, daughter to Robert Duke of Albany, and by her had two sons, Archibald, from whom is derived the male line of the noble family, and Sir Colin Campbell, ancestor to the Earl of Breadalbane. Archibald, who was the elder brother, dying in his father's life-life-time, left issue by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Somerville of Carnwath, ancestor to the Lord Somerville, a son, Colin, who succeeded his grandfather, and was created Earl of Argyl in 1457, who was Lord High Chancellor in the year 1492; from whom, through intermarriages with the principal families of the kingdom, descended the great grandfather of the present Duke.

He had also one daughter, Jane, married to John Earl of Crawford. His Grace dying in 1724, was succeeded by his third son, James, on whom the titles forfeited by his brother were settled by Act of Parliament. James late Duke of Athol was, at his father's death, a Commoner for the said county of Perth, and a Colonel in the Third Regiment of Guards,

His Grace dying Nov. 4, 1774, was succeeded by his son, the present Duke.

DESCENT. Various are the origins given this ancient family by historians, but all agree as to their antiquity and early residence in Scotland, where they had large possessions in the tenth and eleventh centuries; all which were possessed by Frikinus de Moravia, in the reign of David I. in 1130, from whom descended Sir Malcolm Murray, whose son, Sir William, in the year 1282, marrying Adda Moravia, daughter to Malys Seneschal of Strathern, thereby became possessed of the barony of Tullibardin. In 1292, he was one of the barons summoned to Berwick by king Edward I. of England, when that prince was to determine the controversy about the succession to the crown of Scotland, then disputed between John Baliol and Robert Bruce. By the said Adda his wife he had Sir Andrew Murray, his heir, who, in 1332, was joined in the government of Scotland with Robert Stewart the regent, while King David with his Queen were obliged to retire into France: dying in the year 1338, he left a son, William, the father of Walter Murray, whose son David was knighted by King James I. and founded the collegiate church of Tullibardin; and he dying in 1446, left Sir William his successor, and a daughter, Marion, married to Malcolm Drummond of Cargill, ancestor to the Earl of Perth. Sir William, the next heir, was knighted by King James III. made Steward of Strathern; and he marrying Mary, daughter to the Earl Marishal Keith, by her had Andrew, ancestor to the Viscount Stormont; John, who died without issue; and William, his heir; from whom descended John, who was by James VI. created Lord Murray, and Earl of Tullibardin; and his son William marrying Dorothy, the heiress of the Athol family, by her had a son, John, the third Earl, who succeeded also to the title of Earl of Athol by his mother, who was related to the Royal Family. His son John was created Marquis of Athol by Charles II. 1675, and married Amelia Sophia, daughter of the Earl of Derby and Baron Strange of Knockyn, by whom he had John, the first Duke of Athol, ancestor of the present Duke.—Charles, who was created Earl of Dunmore.—James, married the heir of the second Earl of Perth, by whom he had the mother of the late Lord Rollo.—William, the youngest son, married the heiress of Lord Nairn, and changed his name to Nairn when he took that title.

DESCENT.

DESCENT. According to the Scotch writers, this noble family is descended from the renowned Grame, who, in the year 404, was General of King Fergus II.'s army; and in 420, making a breach upon the trench or wall which the Emperor Severus had made between the rivers Forth and Clyd, as the utmost bounds of the Roman empire, to keep out the Scots from molesting them in their possessions, the said trench has ever since been called Grame's Dyke; and during the minority of Eugene II. the son of Fergus II. he was Governor of Scotland, and married a Lady of the Royal House of Denmark. From him descended Sir Patrick Graham, Lord of Dundaff, and one of the hostages for King David's ransom. By his first wife he had William Graham, Lord of Kincarn; and by his second, who was daughter of Sir John Stewart, brother to King Robert II. and sister to Walter Stewart, Lord of Raleston, he had Patrick, from whom descended the Earls of Menteith. William, Lord of Kincarn, married for his 2d wife Mary Stewart, daughter of King Robert III. from whom descended William Lord Graham, who adhered to the party of King James III. against that of the nobles, and was a commander for him at the battle of Bannockburn, 1488, wherein the King lost his life. In return for his loyalty, King James IV. was pleased to create him Earl of Montrose, on March 3, 1503. He was killed at Floddenfield, 1513, and from him descended James, the 5th Earl, who for his attachment to the royal cause was, by Charles I. in 1644, created a Marquis, and suffered public execution at the Cross in Edinburgh, May 21, 1650; but his son James was restored to his honours by Charles II. and his grandson was the father of the present Duke.

The other branch of Ferniherst is the Marquis of Lothian. Robert Kerr, Knight of Cesford, was knighted at the coronation of Anne, Queen of James VI. in 1590; and in 1603 was created Lord Kerr, of Cesford; and in 1616 was further advanced to the dignity of Earl of Roxburgh. UNMARRIED.

CONNEXIONS. His Lordship's grandfather William, who succeeded his father as third Earl, was one of the Privy Council to King William III. in 1696, by whom he was created Marquis of Annandale in 1701, and died in Feb. 1720. He married to his first wife, Sophia, daughter and sole heir to John Fairholm, of Craigiehall, in the county of Stirling, Esq. by whom he had two sons, James, his successor, and William, who died in 1722, and a daughter, Henrietta, who was married to Charles Hope, Earl of Hopetoun: and by his second wife, Charlotte, daughter of John Vander Bemp, of Westminster, Esq. he had one son, George, born in 1720, and John, who died in 1742. DESCENT. This family is very ancient, and derives its surname from the Barony of Johnston, its patrimony in Annandale, of which place was Sir John Johnston, ancestor of this noble Lord, as well as the Johnstons of Westerhall, heirs to the present Marquis. From him descended Sir James Johnston, who by Charles I. was created Lord Johnston, and Earl of Hartfield, whose son James changed his title of Hartfield to that of Annandale, and was father of William the first Marquis, grandfather of the present.

BORN,

UNMARRIED.

CONNEXIONS. William, the 20th Earl, grandfather of the present Countess, succeeded his grandfather in 1733. In 1734, he married Jane Wemyss; daughter of David Earl of Wemyss, and by her, who died in 1747, he had William, the late Earl; and Elizabeth, who married in Sept. 1757, James Wemyss; and other children; but dying in France, Dec. 1750, was succeeded by his son William, then about fifteen years of age, who, in April 1761, married Mary, eldest daughter of William Maxwell of Reston, Esq. by whom he had issue a daughter, Catharine, who died an infant; and Elizabeth, the present Countess of Sutherland. The Countess, their mother, died June 2, 1766, and his Lordship dying June 16, 1766, and his honours being entailed on the heirs general, his only daughter Elizabeth succeeded, and is Countess in her own right.

DESCENT. According to the traditional account of some Scots writers, this family in the Peerage is older than any in North Britain, if not in all Europe; for in the reign of Corbred II. and in the year of Christ 76, a colony called Catti, coming from Germany to Scotland, and there dividing themselves into two parts, from those in the north, the country was called Caithness, and from them in the south, Sutherland; and were Thanes thereof before the title of Earl was used in the kingdom. Allan, who was Thane of Sutherland, gave a very signal defeat to part of the Danish army who had invaded his country, and afterwards was treacherously murdered by the usurper Macbeth, for adhering to his rightful Sovereign Malcolm Canmore, the son of King Duncan. He was succeeded by his son Walter, who by the said King Malcolm was created Earl of Sutherland; and from whom descended John the 11th Earl, whose daughter Elizabeth married Adam Gordon, and became heir to her only brother, when her husband, in his wife's right, became Earl of Sutherland, from whom descended the present Countess's grandfather William.

Note, The family of Sutherland chose the surname of Gordon, and quartered their arms ever since Adam Gordon married the heiress; but John, the 19th Earl, quitted the name of Gordon, and resumed the old name of Sutherland.

HEIR-APPARENT. James Wemyss, who married the present Countess's aunt, in right of his wife.

His Lordship died June 25, 1781, and was succeeded by his son George, the present Earl.

DESCENT. Of this ancient and honourable family of Lindsay, which came first to Scotland with Edgar Atheling, and Margaret his sister, Queen to King Malcolm Canmore, there were two principal branches, the one of Crawford, and the other of Byres, in the county of Haddington. In the reign of David I. about the year 1140, William de Lindsay was a person of great note, as was David his successor, who lived in the time of King William the Lion, about 1200; and he marrying the daughter of John de Crawford, with her got the Barony of that name. From him descended David, who marrying the daughter and coheir of Alexander de Abernethy, they from thence quarter the arms of that family; and having three sons, David, Sir Alexander the second, who was of Glenesk, and Sir William the youngest of Byres, which line afterwards succeeded to the title of Earl of Crawford, and the eldest succeeded as Lord Crawford; but having no male issue, the title of Lord Crawford descended to David, son of Sir Alexander, who by King Robert III. was created Earl of Crawford. He married Jane, daughter of King Robert II. by whom he had a daughter Elizabeth, married to Sir William Keith, and was mother of William, created Earl Marshal; and Alexander his heir; which branch became extinct in the 13th Earl, when the honours descended to the branch of Lindsay of Byres, in the person of John, who became the 14th Earl of Crawford, whose eldest son William continued the line of Crawford; and his youngest son Patrick marrying the heiress of the Crawford family of Garnock, took that name, and had a son John, created Viscount Garnock, the grandfather of the present Earl.

His Lordship died June 3, 1778, and was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Earl.

DESCENT. This noble family is of antient extraction, and likewise famous on account of their rise and arms: For, in the reign of Kenneth III. in the year 980, when the Danes had invaded Scotland, and prevailed in the battle of Loncarty, near Perth, the Scots were worsted, and gave way. In their flight through a narrow pass, they were stopt by a countryman and his two sons, who encouraged them to rally and renew the fight: The countrymen, who were armed with only what their ploughs furnished, leading them on, and returning upon the Danes, totally defeated them, and freed their own country from servitude. The battle being over, the old man, afterwards known by the name of Hay, was brought to the King, who assembling a parliament at Scoon, gave to the said Hay and his two sons, as a just reward of their valour, so much land on the river Tay, in the district of Gowry, as a falcon from a man's hand flew over till it settled; which was afterwards called Errol, and is still possessed by the family of Hay, which is lineally descended from the said valiant Hay. William de Hay was, by James II. in 1452, created Earl of Errol, and Baron Hay of Slanes, from whom descended Charles the 13th Earl, whose sister was grandmother to the late Earl.

HEIR-APPARENT. William, brother to the present Earl.

The first of this name in Britain was Bartholdus Lesley, one of the first rank of nobility in Hungary ; who, in the year 1068, attended Margaret Atheling, the wife of King Malcolm Canmore, in Scotland ; where his services to that Princess were thought so considerable, that King Malcolm gave him his sister to wife ; and, besides many large possessions, which are still in the family, made him Governor of Edinburgh castle, as a peculiar reward of honour, for having first fortified it, and then bravely defended it against the King's enemies. Soon after he was made Lord Lesley, and Earl Ross ; from whom descended George Lesley, created (by James II. in 1457) Earl of Rothes. From whom descended John the 7th Earl ; who, in 1680, was honoured with the titles of Duke of Rothes, Marquis of Bambreigh, Earl of Lesley, Viscount Lugton, and Baron of Achmuty and Cascuberry,

But their father, Charles Radcliffe, joining in the rebellion 1745, and being taken at sea in his passage to Scotland, was, upon a former sentence of death for the rebellion in 1715, beheaded on Tower-hill, December 8, 1746. On the humble petition of the said Countess of Newburgh, and her children, to his Majesty, for some charitable allowance out of the forfeited estate, the King did graciously consent that their case should be referred to the consideration of Parliament, in consequence whereof the Countess had 150l. a year granted for life, and her children 100l. each. DESCENT. The antiquity of this numerous family is sufficiently attested by a grant from King Alexander II. about 1230, to Fergus, the son of John, of the lands and tenements of Forbes, in the county of Aberdeen; and from thence is derived the surname, according to the mode of those days, as it was in South Britain. The first of this name on record was Alexander Forbes, who, in 1303, resolutely defended his castle of Urquart, near Elgin, against King Edward I. which being taken by storm, he and the whole garrison were put to the sword; and by that fatal stroke his family had been extinct, if his wife had not preserved it by Alexander, a posthumous son. From him descended Sir James Forbes, who was knighted by King James II. by whom, in 1440, he was also created Lord Forbes; and by Edigia, his wife, daughter of William Keith, the first Earl Marshal, he had two sons, William his heir; and Patrick, from whom descended Sir Arthur Forbes, Knt. and Bart. father of Arthur, the first Earl of Granard, in Ireland. In the reign of Malcolm III. called Canmore, Alexander Fraser was donator to the abbey of Kelso, as was also Simon, in the reign of Malcolm IV. called the Maiden, about the year 1157. But since the year 1214, in the reign of Alexander II. there is a distinct account of the Fraser

Frazer family, that is, of the predecessors of the Lord Saltoun, who, when Lairds of Philorth, in Buchan, became heirs to the Thaness of Cowie, their ancestors in Kincardineshire. From them descended John Frazer, who died without male issue, but left a daughter, Honora, who was married to Robert Keith, ancestor to the Earls Marshal, from which marriage came only a daughter, who was married to Alexander the first Earl of Huntley, who got thereby the mother's estate; whence it comes that the Duke of Gordon's family bears the arms of Frazer. Andrew, brother of John, continued the line; from whom descended Sir Alexander Frazer. He was created a Baron in 1445, and was grandfather to the second Lord Saltoun.

This ancient family is deduced from Otho, a Baron in Italy, descended from the Great Duke of Tuscany; and of this family were several Barons of Offaley, before they were Earls of Kildare; and of it were the Earls of Desmond, March, and Macclesfield, and the Lord Grandison, and Barons of Bromley. Otho's son Walter came into England with William the Conqueror, and was a Baron and Constable of the Castle of Windsor: He had three sons; from the youngest, who was William of Windsor, the Earl of Plymouth and the Lord Windsor maternally descended; Robert, the second, surnamed of Windsor, was Baron of Eton or Estaines in Essex. Gerald, who was the eldest son, was sometimes surnamed Fitz-Walter; and marrying Nesta, daughter to Rheese Prince of South Wales (concubine to King Henry I.), by her had William, Maurice, and David. From William descended, in a direct male line, Dutton, late Lord Gerard of Bromley, Charles Earl of Macclesfield, Sir Thomas Gerard, Bart. and the Earls of Kerry. This ancient and noble family, which is of English extraction, was originally named Tristram, till, on St. Lawrence's day, Sir Almericus being to command an army against the Danes near Clantarf, he made a vow to that Saint, that, if he got the victory, he and his posterity, in honour thereof, should bear the name of St. Lawrence, which has so continued to this time; and the sword wherewith he fought is now hanging up in the great hall at Howth, the seat of the present Earl: And what is very remarkable in this family is, that the estate and barony they now enjoy they have possessed near 600 years, without the least increasing or diminishing, during which time there never was an attainder in it. His valour and conduct were so remarkable, and the fight so successful, that the lands and title of Howth were allotted to him for his part of the conquest. From Almericus, the first Lord, his present Lordship is lineally descended, and is the twenty-seventh Baron.

His Lordship dying March 3, 1776, was succeeded by his son, John, the present Lord.

DESCENT. Richard de Courcy, Lord of Courcy, was one of the Noblemen that accompanied William Duke of Normandy into England, in his expedition for the conquest thereof, and was present with him in the battle of Hastings, Oct. 14, 1066, where King Harold was slain, and the fate of the kingdom decided in the Duke's favour. He was rewarded by the Conqueror for his services with a great number of Lordships in England, particularly the Lordship of Stoke, in the county of Somerset, called from him Stoke Courcy, which he held with several others per Baroniam. The said Richard de Courcy died in the year 1098, and was succeeded by his son, Robert de Courcy, Lord of Courcy in Normandy, and Baron of Stoke-Courcy in England. He was Steward of the Household of King Henry I. and was, by the said King, created one of the great Barons at Westminster, in 1133. From him descended his great-grandson, Sir John de Courcy, Knight, Baron of Stoke-Courcy, who served King Henry II. in all his wars; and in Ireland, at his own charge, fought five remarkable battles, whereby he conquered the Province of Ulster, and a great part of Connaught. In the year 1181, he was created, by King Henry II. Earl of Ulster, and Lord of Connaught; from the year 1175 to 1179 he was Joint Governor of Ireland; and from 1181 to 1190 Sole Governor; but being in that year accused by Hugh de Lacy, Earl of Meath, of disrespect to the King, was sent prisoner to London, and confined in the Tower for about a year.

year, when a dispute arose between John King of England and Philip-Augustus King of France, about the title to the Duchy of Normandy, the which was referred to two champions to decide: The French champion was ready, but none of King John's subjects would answer the challenge; upon which the King was informed, that John de Courcy, late Earl of Ulster, who was then a prisoner in the Tower of London, was the only man in his dominions who could do it, if he would undertake it. The King sent twice to the Earl for that purpose; but he refused it each time, by reason of the ungrateful returns made for his services, in imprisoning him, unheard, at the suit of his rival and enemy, Hugh de Lacy; but the King sending the third time, he made answer, that, for the crown and dignity of the realm, he would hazard his life. The day of combat being appointed (in Normandy), the Earl's own sword was sent for out of Ireland; but when the day came, and every thing was ready for the fight, and the champions were entered the lists, in the presence of the Kings of England, France, and Scotland, the French Champion, not liking the strong proportion of the Earl's body, nor the terrible weapon he bore in his hand, when the trumpets sounded the last charge, he set spurs to his horse, broke through the lists, and fled into Spain, from whence he never returned. The French Champion thus taking his flight, the victory was adjudged to the Earl of Ulster; but the King hearing of his great strength, and being willing to see some trial of it, then ordered an helmet of excellent proof, full faced with mail, to be laid on a block of wood, which the Earl with one blow cut asunder, and struck his sword so deep into the wood, that none there present but himself could draw it out again; which sword, together with his armour, are to this day preserved in the Tower of London. After this noble performance, the King restored him to his former titles and estate, which was valued at that time at twenty-five thousand marks sterling per annum (a vast income in those days), and likewise bade him ask for any thing else in his gift he had a mind to, and it should be granted. Upon which the Earl replied, he had titles and estate enough, but desired that he and his successors, the heirs-male of his family (after him), might have the privilege (after their first obeisance) to be covered in the royal presence of him and his successors, Kings of England; which the King granted, and the said privilege is preserved in the family to this day. The Earl died about the year 1210, leaving issue Miles, who succeeded; but was kept out of the Earldom of Ulster by Hugh de Lacy, who had a grant of it from King John, on taking Earl John, and sending him prisoner to London; for Miles, claiming the Earldom after his father's death, the said Lacy replied, that he would maintain King John's last grant of it to himself, since Earl John never returned into Ireland to reverse his outlawry; and the said Lacy being a great favourite of the King's, and a very powerful man, Miles was forced to quit his pretensions, but was created Baron of Kinsale; and living afterwards altogether in Ireland, he never claimed the Barony of Stoke-Courcy; but, dying in the beginning of Henry III.'s reign, was succeeded by his son (2d Lord) Patrick de Courcy, Baron of Kinsale; who married the daughter and heir of Miles de Cogan, who was one of the great Conquerors of Ireland. To this Miles de Cogan, and Robert Fitz-

Stephen, and to their heirs, King Henry II. in a Parliament held at Oxford, in the year 1177, did grant the whole kingdom of Cork to be held of him, and his son John, by the service of sixty Knights fees; the half of which kingdom, Patrick enjoyed in the right of his wife; for in the 20th year of Henry III. he was stiled Dominus Medietatis Regni Corcagiæ. He was succeeded by Nicholas de Courcy, his son, who divided the chief rents of his Barony of Kinsale with the then Bishop of Cork. By Mabella, his wife, he had three sons, and was succeeded by the eldest son, ancestor of the present Lord.

DESCENT. This family is of great antiquity in the West Riding of the county of York, and derived its name from the hamlet of Howroyd, or Holroyd, in Barkisland, six miles from Halifax, which they formerly possessed. The name has been differently spelt, viz. Howroyde, Howleroyd, Hooleroid, Holerode, Oulroyd, Holroide, Holroid, Hole-royd, Holroyd, &c. the origin of which has been derived by our antiquaries from the Anglo-Saxon Hou, an hill, and roïð, which word signifies, when applied to land, such as was barren and uncultivated, and which on that account paid only two-pence per acre, and was freed from the service of grave and other taxes. This origin well suits the soil and situation of Howroyd or Holroyd (now the property of Joshua Horton, Esq.), which joins to the mountainous country, separating Lancashire from Yorkshire, called Blackstone Edge. The name also is to be found in Holstein, &c. whence the Anglo-Saxons came.

He married Offa, the third daughter of Gouldbrand, by a daughter of Sigefrid King of Sogen, in Norway. This Gouldbrand, who was a dignified Baron, had issue Gouldbrand, his successor, and three daughters. From Assalina, the eldest, descended the Dukes of Normandy; Elfrida, the second, was ancestor of the Earls of Tiodoe, &c. and from Offa, the youngest, who married Harold, descended all the Kings of Norway. This Gouldbrand was the progenitor of the Princes of Simmern, in Germany; the Barons Grant, in Scotland; the Dallapiels of Strom, in Norway; the Dallisons, in Kent; and of Philip, surnamed Dalle-Philip, who resided at the court of Richard, the second Duke of Normandy, and married Adalicia, the Duke's daughter, by whom he had a daughter, Violetta, who married Jocelin, third son of the Earl of Luxemburg; and two sons, Richard and Forbrand, both of whom followed Godfrey de Boulogne to the Holy Wars, and were both slain there, anno 1142. Richard had married Maria, the daughter of Guido Duke of Lorrain, related to all the Kings and Princes in Alropia. They had issue two daughters, and two sons, William and Guido. The eldest was made Earl of Vernon in Normandy, and of Devon in England, from whom descended the noble family of Vernon. Hun

Huntingdon, and of the family of Hastings. Guido, by right of his mother, became Lord Delaval, and married Lucia, daughter of Robert of Mortaigne, half-brother to William the Conqueror; by whom he had Guioferi, Henric, and Hovisa, who married Amery Viscount Towar, Baron of Interlied in Scotland. Guioferi, the eldest son, Lord of Delaval, married Euodocia, daughter of the Earl of St. Clare, progenitor of that family, Princes of Orcades; from whom the Earls of Caithness of Scotland are descended, as well as all of the noble house of Delaval in Normandy. The second son was one of those Knights who carried the head-banners, when his cousin William Duke of Normandy conquered England, in 1066. From the elder branch descended Sir John Delaval of Seaton-Delaval, Knt. who was High Sheriff of Northumberland, 1 Philip and Mary, and married Anne, daughter of Ralph Lord Ogle, by whom he had three sons, and three daughters, and was succeeded by Sir Robert, his eldest son, Knight, who was Sheriff of Northumberland the 17th and 25th of Elizabeth, and married Dorothy, daughter of Sir Ralph Greye of Chillingham, Knt. (ancestor of the Greys of Werk) by whom he had seven sons, and one daughter. Sir Ralph was the eldest, from whom descended the first Baronet in this family, and the honour is now extinct. AN
IN FOUR PARTS.

THE First Part of the following Directory distinguishes the Mottos in alphabetical order, and refers the reader to each Peer's Title, and his Family Name, in separate columns.

The Second Part distinguishes the Family Names in alphabetical order, and refers to each respective Title of Peers, and their Eldest Sons, in separate columns.

The Third Part distinguishes the Titles of all the Peers, and their Eldest Sons, in alphabetical order, and refers to their respective Family Names and Mottos, in separate columns.

In all the above Three Parts are comprized such Peers as have been attained within this century.

The Fourth Part distinguishes such Peerages of the Three Kingdoms as are become extinct, by an Alphabetical Directory, marking the year in which they became extinct.

By the Alphabetical Directory of Mottos may be discovered any Peer of Great Britain or Ireland as he passes by, whose Motto appears with him, on his Carriage or otherwise; and the Coronets prefixed to the First Part of this Book will, in case the same Motto belongs to more Peers than one, distinguish to which it belongs by the Coronet appearing on such Carriage, &c.

The other two Alphabetical Directories will shew their utility in many instances, and may lead towards a discovery where cyphers only appear.

The several initial capital letters used throughout this work, such as E D, E E, E M, S V, I B, F D, &c. are to be read as follows: for letter E, where it is the first of the two capital letters, read English, where it is the last, read Earl; for letter S, read Scotch; for I, read Irish; for F, read French; for D, read Duke; for M, read Marquis; for V, read Viscount; for B, read Baron.

For the TRANSLATION of the Mottos, see the INDEX TO THE PLATES, preceding the Family Descriptions.
